Person Offenses in Juvenile Court, 1986–1995

by Anne L. Stahl

Person Offenses up 98% From 1986

In 1995, U.S. juvenile courts handled an estimated 377,300 delinquency cases in which the most serious charge was an offense against a person. Person offenses include assault, robbery, rape, and homicide. The 1995 person offense caseload was 98% greater than in 1986. Person offense cases accounted for 22% of all delinquency cases in 1995, compared with 16% in 1986.

The number of person offense cases disposed by juvenile courts in 1995 was equivalent to 13.4 cases for every 1,000 juveniles in the United States age 10 or over who were potentially under the jurisdiction of a juvenile court in the State where the offense was committed. The person offense case rate increased 82% between 1986 and 1995. The case rate for property offenses, in contrast, increased 13% between 1986 and 1995, while the drug offense case rate grew 102% and the rate for public order offenses increased 36%.

In 1995, homicide was the most serious charge in 2,800 cases. This was less than 1% of all person offense cases handled by juvenile courts. The vast majority of person offense cases involved charges of simple assault (205,500) or aggravated assault (93,200). Together, these two offenses accounted for 79% of all person offense cases processed in 1995.

Juvenile courts handled 99% more cases involving offenses included in the Federal Bureau of Investigation’s Violent Crime Index in 1995 than in 1986. Four offenses make up the Index: homicide, forcible rape, robbery, and aggravated assault. Homicide cases increased 87%, aggravated assault cases grew 136%, robbery cases were up 53%, and cases of forcible rape climbed 48%.

Characteristics of Offenders

Compared with 1986, juveniles involved in person offense cases in 1995 were younger and slightly more likely to be female. In 1995, 64% of person offense cases involved juveniles under age 16, compared with 59% in 1986. Females were involved in 24% of person offense cases in 1995, compared with 20% in 1986. More than half (59%) of person offense cases in 1995 involved white youth, 38% involved black youth, and 3% involved youth of other races.
Use of Detention

Nearly one-quarter (23%) of the person offense cases processed by juvenile courts in 1995 involved the use of detention at some point between referral and disposition. Approximately the same proportion of drug cases involved detention (24%). In comparison, youth were detained in a smaller proportion of property cases (15%).

Case Processing

Of the 377,300 person offense cases disposed by U.S. juvenile courts in 1995, 58% were handled formally (that is, a petition was filed requesting a hearing). Of the individuals involved in petitioned cases, 2% were waived to the criminal court system where they were subject to conviction as criminals, 53% were formally adjudicated as delinquents in the juvenile court, and 45% were petitioned but not adjudicated delinquent.

In 31% of the 116,400 person offense cases that were formally adjudicated by juvenile courts in 1995, the most severe disposition imposed by the court was placement out of the home in a residential facility. Probation was ordered in 53% of the cases, while 11% resulted in other sanctions, including referral to an outside agency, fines, community service, and restitution. Approximately 6% of formally adjudicated person offense cases were released for various reasons with no sanctions imposed.

In 1995, of the estimated 98,200 person offense cases formally petitioned by the court but not adjudicated, most (63%) were dismissed. However, in 21% of these cases the juvenile agreed to informal probation and in 14% to other dispositions. About 3% of nonadjudicated person offense cases resulted in voluntary out-of-home placement.

More than half (52%) of the 158,100 person offense cases handled informally (no petition was filed) by juvenile courts in 1995 were dismissed. The remainder resulted in voluntary probation (31%) or other dispositions (17%), while a small number (1%) resulted in out-of-home placements.
