Probation and Parole 1985

During 1985, the Nation's adult probation population grew by 7.4% to reach a record 1,870,132 adult offenders serving a sentence of probation supervision in the community. The number of offenders under parole supervision in the community after release from a State or Federal prison climbed by 3.9% to 277,438—also a new record population at yearend. Including those serving sentences in local jails or in State or Federal prisons, the number of adults in the United States under some form of correctional supervision at the end of 1985 reached 2.9 million, an increase of nearly 200,000 during the year.

Probation

Forty-three States (including the District of Columbia) reported increases in their probation population during 1985 (table 1). Probation population growth was most rapid in the Southern States, with an overall increase of 9%. Texas, which accounted for less than 14% of the Nation's probationers in 1984, contributed 27% of the increase for the Nation during 1985. Probation populations in the Midwest and West grew almost as fast (8.2% and 7.5%) as in the South. Texas (269,909), California (210,449), Florida (130,767), and New York (100,816) were the States with the largest probation populations at yearend. South Dakota's increase of nearly 50% during the year was attributed by that State to changes in the sentencing of drunk driving offenders. The Federal probation population grew at a slower pace than the State probation population (5.5% vs. 7.5%).

Parole

Thirty-one States had increases in parole populations during 1985 (table 2). Parole populations include those released from prison by a parole board as well as those released to a term of supervision after completion of a determinate, or fixed, sentence (mandatory release). Parole populations grew most rapidly in the Western States, with California accounting for nearly two-thirds of the region's increase. In Midwestern States, by contrast, the number of offenders under parole supervision decreased by nearly 10%, largely because of declines in Michigan and Ohio. The number of Federal parolees at the end of 1985 was essentially unchanged from a year earlier.

Methods of release from prison have been changing in recent years, reflecting a diminished role for parole boards (table 3). In 1977 nearly 72% of State prison releases were by a parole board decision; by 1985 this had dropped to 43%. Conversely, the percentage of mandatory releases from State prisons grew from about 6% of all releases in 1977 to 31% in 1985.

Adults under correctional supervision

Of the 2.9 million adults under the care or custody of a correctional agency at the end of 1985, 3 out of 4 were being supervised in the community:

Supervised in the community	74.0%
Probation	64.4
Parole	9.6
Incarcerated	26.0%
Jail	8.7
Prison	17.3
Total under correctional supervision	100%

An estimated 1.65% of all adults in the Nation, or about 1 of every 61 adults, was on probation, in jail, in prison, or on parole at yearend 1985, up from 1.45% 2 years earlier (table 4).

January 1987

This is the fifth annual Bureau of Justice Statistics bulletin presenting statistics for the Uniform Parole Reports (UPR) and the National Probation Reports (NPR). In conjunction with counts of jail and prison populations, the data presented here indicate the relative use of different types of correctional sanctions in the United States.

The generous cooperation of probation and parole agencies in participating in these surveys is gratefully acknowledged.

Steven R. Schlesinger
Director

Probation populations increased by about 18% during the 2 years, compared to growth of about 15% in prison and jail populations and 13% in the number of those under parole supervision. Nearly 87% of the total correctional population was male and 64% was white, 34% black, and just over 1% were of other races.

Probation notes

Alabama--The number of exits was estimated based on the known number of admissions and the final yearend count.

Arkansas--Population counts were estimated.

Connecticut--Jurisdiction over 12,990 pretrial alcohol cases was transferred to the Pre-Trial Bail Commission; they are no longer counted as probation supervision cases.

Illinois--Population exits were estimated.

Indiana--Probation data are for calendar year 1984.

Maryland--The Maryland case count was reduced 10% to provide an estimate of the number of individuals.

Montana--Probation data are for 1984.

Nevada--Population counts were estimated.

Oklahoma--The number of entries was estimated.

Pennsylvania--The number of entries and exits were estimated and the population increase was attributed by State authorities to additional "driving while intoxicated" cases now under supervision.

South Dakota--The number of entries and exits could not be reported by the State. The increase in the population was attributed to growth in the number of "driving while intoxicated" cases now under supervision.

Utah--State authorities attribute the decline in the probation population to a law that restricts the length of probation terms and limits the use of probation for less serious crimes.

Vermont--Population counts were estimated.

Virginia--Probation data are for July 1, 1984 to June 30, 1985.

Parole notes

Federal--The parole count for 1985 excludes 3,530 "special parolees" who are drug offenders and must serve a supplemental period of supervision at the completion of their regular parole terms. Military parolees (391 offenders) are also excluded.

California--Parole data include both releases from the Department of Corrections and the California Youth Authority. Entries include 6,246 absconders who were reinstated on parole; exits include 6,185 suspended parolees who were at large as a result of absconding.

Connecticut--This State abolished parole supervision in 1981. The small number of parolees reflects persons convicted of crimes that occurred prior to the change in the law.

District of Columbia--Cases on inactive supervision for 1984 and 1985 are included in the parole counts.

Idaho--Data for 1985 were estimated.

Iowa--Exits due to death are not known.

Kansas--Data for 1985 were estimated.

Maine--This State abolished parole supervision in 1976. The small number of parolees reflects persons convicted of crimes that occurred prior to the change in the law.

Massachusetts--Parole data exclude parolees from other States being supervised in Massachusetts.

Mississippi--Entries include 35 supervised work release cases and 2 supervised earned release cases.

Missouri--Data for 1985 were estimated.

Montana--Data are for calendar year 1984.

Nevada--Data for 1985 were estimated.

New Jersey--Exits include those cases recalled by the courts.

New York--Data exclude county jail parolees.

Ohio--Exits include closed cases supervised for other States under the Interstate Compact.

Oregon--Parole data exclude inactive cases and misdemeanants.

Pennsylvania--Data exclude 19,536 county parolees who are supervised by county parole authorities and include 783 "special parolees" with sentences of less than 2 years who were certified to be under the jurisdiction of the State parole board by local courts.

Rhode Island--Parole data for 1985 include 17 persons being held on detention warrants, 2 persons serving Federal sentences, 2 persons being supervised by the U.S. Immigration Service, and 2

1985 - 175,727,000. Population counts for probation, parole, and prison are for December 31, and jail counts are for June 30.

Bureau of Justice Statistics Bulletins are prepared principally by BJS staff. This report was written by Lawrence A. Greenfeld, corrections unit chief. Marilyn Marbrook, publications unit chief, administered report production, assisted by Jeanne Harris, Arlene F. James, and Betty Sherman. Diana Cull, Stephanie Brown, and Art Ciampa of the U.S. Bureau of the Census carried out the collection and processing of these data.

January 1987, NCJ-103683

Crime and Justice Facts, 1985 summarizes much of what BJS has learned about crime and justice in the United States since December 31, 1985. It is intended to bridge the gap between the first and second editions of the Report to the Nation on Crime and Justice, a comprehensive statistical portrait of crime and justice in the United States, first published in October 1983.

Crime and Justice Facts, 1985 may be ordered (NCJ-100757) from the Justice Statistics Clearinghouse, NCJRS, P.O. Box 6000, Rockville, MD 20850, toll-free 800-732-3277 (local number 301-251-5500). Postage and handling are charged for bulk orders.
