I. STUDY DESCRIPTION

During the period 1980-1985, the National Institute of Justice (NIJ) sponsored a controlled experiment in the employment services field to test the hypothesis that job counseling and placement services, accompanied by intensive follow-up after placement, would significantly increase the effectiveness of employment programs for recent prison releasees. Typically, employment services have little contact with their clients after they are placed, and some experts had concluded that this was a major shortcoming.

The test was structured to include three ongoing and reputedly exemplary employment services programs, all of which agreed to adhere to a predetermined experimental design. The programs were:

- The Comprehensive Offender Employment Resource System (COERS) in Boston;
- Project JOVE in San Diego; and
- The Safer Foundation in Chicago.

A total of 2,045 individuals recently released from adult correctional facilities and with a history of primarily income-producing offenses participated in the field test as program clients: 511 in Boston, 934 in Chicago, and 600 in San Diego.

The experimental design was of a standard nature and allowed participants in each site to be assigned to (1) an experimental group that received both comprehensive employment-related services (for example, job counseling and placement assistance) and special follow-up services for six months after they were placed, or (2) a control group that received normal services only. In addition, comparison groups consisting of program participants who were not placed were formed so that an assessment of the general value of employment services could be made.

The results of this evaluative research will not be particularly encouraging to those who believe that intensive employment and follow-up services are an essential part of the post-incarceration process, for:

- The research experiment, which allowed randomly assigned experimental and control groups to be compared, did not demonstrate that special follow-up services decreased the chances of long-term criminal recidivism.
- The overall evaluation research, however, which included analysis of placed versus not placed participants, did show that employment itself can be a factor in decreasing recidivism. The evidence to support this thesis was found in Chicago, where clients placed by the Safer Foundation had significantly lower recidivism rates than those who were not placed.
- Other results that are not particularly surprising emerged from the statistical regression analysis that was conducted. These include the findings in at least one site that:
  - past drug and alcohol abusers and individuals with a long criminal history tended to have significantly higher criminal recidivism than those without these characteristics; and
  - older and married individuals had significantly lower recidivism rates than their younger and unmarried counterparts.

II. RESEARCH DESIGN AND METHODOLOGY

A. Design and Methodology

A total of 2,045 individuals participated in the field test for this study: 511 in Boston, 934 in Chicago, and 600 in San Diego. All of the participants met the following eligibility requirements:

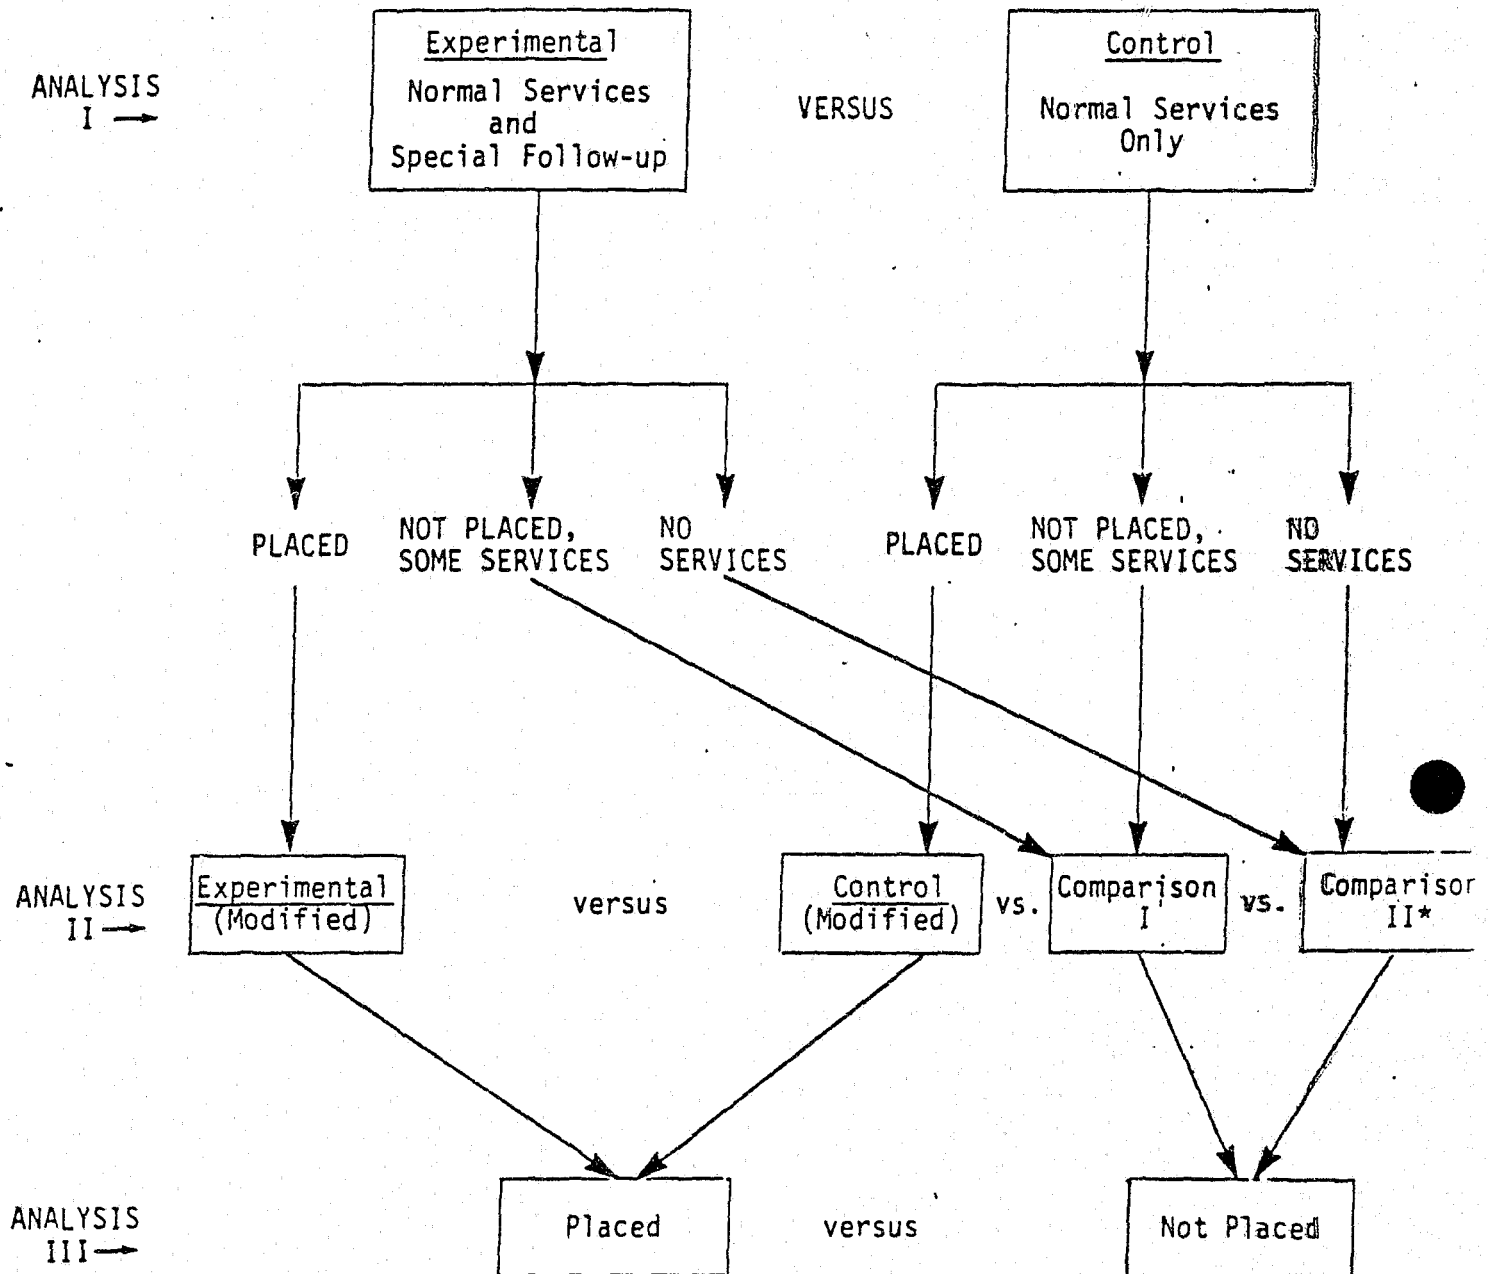

- Participants voluntarily accepted program services;
- Participants had been incarcerated at an adult Federal, State, or local correctional facility for at least three months and had been released within six months of program participation; and
- Participants exhibited a pattern of income-producing offenses; i.e., the majority of the ex-offenders' arrests or convictions were for income-producing crimes.

As illustrated in Figure 1, clients selected for participation were randomly assigned to the experimental or control group at each site. Clients from both groups who had not been placed by the end of the study or who had not received any services were placed in comparison groups so that an assessment of the general value of employment services could be made.

Initially, participants from all groups were offered the standard services available to all clients in the selected employment services programs. In addition, each experimental group member was assigned to a follow-up specialist who provided emotional support and advocacy to the client during the job search as well as during the 180-day period following job placement. The special services provided during the post-placement period included weekly contact with the client, crisis intervention, and referral to other agencies when necessary.

To evaluate the impact that these enhanced employment services had on the recidivism and employment rates of experimental group clients, rap sheets for each individual were obtained for approximately two years after the individual entered the program. In addition, data for each participant were collected at 30, 90, and 180 day intervals after job placement. These data included short-term employment and self-reported rearrest data as well as information regarding the services that each participant actually received. The Lazar Institute also documented the extent of services available to the client by completing comprehensive delivery systems analyses at each site. These analyses provided in-depth information concerning the types of services offered and the methods of implementation each program used.

*This group not available in Boston.

While employment services, recidivism, and short-term employment data were readily available for almost all participants, long-term employment data were not available for any of the participating clients because the study design limited client follow-up to six months after job placement. Short-term employment data was not available for clients who had dropped out of the program prior to the initial data collection period or who had never enrolled in the program. Since initial group assignment was random, this deficiency did not bias the comparison between the experimental and control groups. The study design, with its requirement of voluntary program participation, also precluded the formation of a randomly assigned no-services group. To compensate for the absence of such a group, a non-randomly assigned no-services group was formed that consisted of clients who had volunteered for the program but never actually enrolled in it.

B. Background Characteristics of Research Participants

Clients in the experimental and control groups were comparable at the three sites. The typical client from both groups was a single white male in his late twenties who had not completed high school. In-depth analysis of the demographic characteristics and arrest and employment histories of the participants revealed the following:

- The majority of the participants at all three sites were in their twenties. Twenty-three percent, 28 percent, and 31 percent of the Boston, Chicago, and San Diego clients respectively were over 30 years old. Only three percent of all participants were over 40. This age distribution appears to be consistent with past research relating age to criminal behavior and indicating that the majority of offenders are young and tend to mature out of crime.
- The overwhelming majority of this study's participants were male; only eight percent of the Boston and Chicago participants and 20 percent of the San Diego participants were female.
- Racial composition varied more than any other demographic characteristic across all three sites. Close to half of the Boston and San Diego participants were white, while only 15 percent of the Chicago participants were white. Blacks comprised 42 percent of the Boston study population, 34 percent of the San Diego study population, and 80 percent of the Chicago study population. San Diego had the only significant Hispanic group, with 16 percent of the participants there reporting Spanish origins.
- More than one-third of all participants had graduated from high school or earned a Graduate Equivalency Diploma. Eleven percent of the Boston participants, ten percent of the Chicago participants and 18 percent of the San Diego participants had some education beyond high school.
- Seventy-six percent of all participants in Boston, 71 percent in Chicago, and 58 percent in San Diego had never been married.
- Mean number of prior arrests was 14 arrests in Boston, eight arrests in Chicago, and 10 arrests in San Diego. The apparent difference between Boston and the other two sites may result from different data sources. In Boston, arrest information was only available from Massachusetts rap sheets. In San Diego and Chicago, prior arrest data were self-reported and, therefore, may have been less accurate than the Boston data.
- Over 80 percent of all study participants had worked at some time in their lives. Of the approximately one-third working at the time of their most recent arrest prior to program participation, 50 percent of the Boston participants, 46 percent of the Chicago participants, and 41 percent of the San Diego participants had never held a job for more than 12 months. The mean number of months for the longest job ever held by a client ranged from 20 months in Chicago and Boston to 27 months in San Diego. These means, however, were inflated by a small number of participants who had worked at one job for more than four years.

- Salaries were generally quite low. Average weekly salaries ranged from $166.20 in Boston to $175.34 in Chicago to $203.50 in San Diego.

C. Program Services Provided to Research Participants

The primary goal of all three employment services programs was the placement of clients in unsubsidized jobs. In pursuit of this goal, all clients who enrolled in an employment services program received a minimum level of assistance, such as orientation or screening and evaluation. The programs usually combined these two services in an intake unit, processing all clients through this unit upon initial enrollment. The intake counselors assigned to the unit generally solicited a personal history from the client, identified the client's interests and skills, and acquainted the client with the services offered by the program. In addition, the intake counselor offered a limited number of clients support services such as food, transportation, clothing, and shelter in an attempt to meet the client's survival needs and prepare him for the job search.

Following intake, the client usually began to receive those services deemed most suitable for him by the intake counselor. In most cases, these services included a relatively brief job development seminar focusing on issues such as appropriate dress and deportment, typical job rules, goal setting, interviewing techniques, and job hunt strategies. After participating in the seminar, the client met with a job developer to review the client's goals and to draw up an agreement outlining each party's responsibilities during the job search. The job developer assisted the client in various ways during the job search, depending upon the client's skills and level of confidence. In some cases, the job developer merely provided moral support and some coaching; in others, if the client's self-confidence was particularly low, the job developer actually contacted employers and accompanied the client on job interviews. The job developer also followed up on all placed clients at intervals of 30, 60, 90, and 180 days to determine employment status and sometimes attempted to reinvolve unemployed clients in the program.

During the job search, experimental group members also met with their follow-up counselor, who provided additional support both before and after placement. Such services were provided on approximately a weekly basis.

While job development, job counseling, job readiness training, orientation, needs assessment, screening, and evaluation were the most frequently provided services, each program also offered a wide range of other types of assistance. All of the programs in this study provided different types of specialized counseling. For instance, family counseling, legal services, counseling for youths, and special services for women were available to selected clients at most sites.

Another service that was offered to some clients was referral to other agencies. Although clients were rarely referred to other agencies in San Diego and Chicago, this option was frequently exercised in Boston. Clients were most commonly referred to other job development, job placement, and job counseling programs. For help that was beyond the scope of an employment program, clients with mental and physical handicaps were sent to the State Department of Rehabilitation. Referral to welfare and to housing and substance abuse programs also occurred occasionally for clients with serious financial or drug problems.

In addition to these programs, training and vocational education services funded under the Joint Partnership Training Act (formerly known as CETA programs) were offered to selected clients. Enrollment in these programs was limited, however, and was generally reserved for the neediest clients who had demonstrated the most potential for success. Some innovative services that actually provided employment opportunities for the clients, such as the Weatherization Program (a JOVE-sponsored business staffed by ex-offenders who weatherized low-income housing) and the Economic Development Program (a client-run printing press) in San Diego, were also available at specific sites.

III. FILE STRUCTURE

The data for each program site—Boston, Chicago, and San Diego—appear in separate files on a magnetic tape in the aforementioned order. The data appear in a card image format based on 80 column records, with eight records per case. In the Boston file, there are 183 variables for 381 cases. In Chicago, there are 191 variables for 529 cases; in San Diego there are 191 variables for 305 cases.

The tape is unlabeled, nine-track, and 6250 BPI. The blocksize is 7200. The logical record length is 80.

APPENDIX A
DATA COLLECTION FORMS

INTRODUCTION

The data collection forms prepared for use in evaluation of the ex-offender employment services field test are "event-oriented." When a major event occurred in client processing, a data form was completed that described the event and summarized program services delivered since the last major event was reported. For purposes of collecting evaluation data, "major events" were:

- initial program contact ("baseline")--Form C;
- release from prison--Form F;
- release from pre-release center or similar facility--Form I;
- initial placement or dropout--Form G;
- program re-entry and outcome--Form J; and
- program follow-up after placement, with information summarized at 30, 90, and 180 days after placement--Form H.

In addition to these data, tracking information was needed to assist with the location of clients for the final follow-up interviews, to be conducted by Lazar after program follow-up with the clients had ended. Tracking information was collected at the time of initial program contact or "baseline" (Form D) and was updated each time a subsequent "major event" occurred and a report on it was submitted (Form E).

A form was also provided to list all clients in the study and to check off the various reports as they were submitted (Form K). This "Master List" served as an overall summary of the number of clients in the study and their status in terms of the "major events" of interest for the study.

Forms were mailed to Lazar periodically, as shown on the list of "Mailing Dates" that follows this "Introduction." As indicated, forms were to be mailed weekly starting January 1981, every two weeks in February, and monthly thereafter.

A brief description of each form follows. The discussion considers the forms in the order that they appear in this document which is roughly the order in which they were used.

Master List of Clients and Forms--NIJ Field Test--Form K

Each client in the NIJ Field Test was listed on the Master List. Client Study Identification Numbers were assigned consecutively starting with 1, in each site. The assignment of clients to the experimental or control group were based on their birthdate.

Whenever completed forms on individual clients were mailed to Lazar (see "Mailing Dates"), the Master List of all clients selected for the study as of that time was forwarded as well. Additionally, the appropriate boxes on the Master List were checked to indicate all forms that had been mailed to Lazar for each client.

The Master List helped ensure that timely information was provided on each client in the study. Additionally, programs were able to use the Master List for internal management purposes and to help monitor client progress through the various "major events" in client processing.

Initial Program Contact ("Baseline")--Form C

At the time of a program's initial contact with the client, "baseline" data were acquired on the client's background (e.g., age, ethnicity, sex, family situation, education, prior training, etc.), work history, and criminal history. This form was completed for all clients in the NIJ Field Test.

This form, and all subsequent ones, had cover sheets showing the client's name and Study Identification Number. This sheet was removed from the form and destroyed after Lazar had double-checked the Client Study Identification Number from the Master List.

Tracking Information Sheet--Initial Program Contact ("Baseline")--Form D

This form was completed for each client in the NIJ Field Test at the time of the program's initial contact with the client. The form sought information that could be used to locate a client in order to conduct a follow-up interview. Because it was impossible to determine in advance the clients who would continue in the program and those who would drop out, it was important that the baseline tracking data be as comprehensive and accurate as possible. Only in this way would Lazar staff be able to locate a high percentage of clients for final follow-up interviews.

Tracking Information Sheet--Update--Form E

This form was used to update the information obtained from the client at the time of initial program contact. The form was completed for each client in the NIJ Field Test each time that a "major event" occurred for evaluation reporting purposes (that is, release from prison; release from pre-release center; initial placement or dropout; program re-entry and outcome; or program follow-up after placement, summarized at 30, 90, and 180 days after initial placement).

Release From Prison--Form F

The "Release from Prison" form was completed for each client in the NIJ Field Test. The form summarizes information pertaining to the client's release from prison (e.g., date and conditions of release) and the program's services to the client while imprisoned. "Prison" includes both prisons and jails, but does not include pre-release centers or similar facilities.

Release from Pre-Release Center--Form I

This form was completed only for clients who spent time in a pre-release center or similar facility, such as a halfway house, where the client is considered "in custody". A client would enter a pre-release center or similar facility only after serving time in prison.

Initial Placement or Dropout--Form G

The "Initial Placement or Dropout" form was completed for each client in the NIJ Field Test. The form covers the period after release from prison, a pre-release center or a similar facility until the initial placement or until the client dropped out. For purposes of the study, "placement" includes job, training, education or other placements; "dropout" occurred when the client had no contact with the program during a three-week period.

Program Re-Entry and Outcome--Form J

This form was completed only for clients who dropped out of the program and subsequently re-entered it. The information in the "Program Re-Entry and Outcome" form is identical to that of the "Initial Placement or Dropout" form but applies to the time period after program re-entry until subsequent placement or until the client dropped out again. Such clients remained in the Field Test groups to which they were originally assigned (i.e., clients originally in the experimental group remained in the experimental group when they re-entered the program; similarly, clients originally in the control group re-entered the program as control group clients). Additionally, they retained the same Client Study Identification Numbers as originally assigned.

Program Follow-Up After Placement--Form H

The "Program Follow-Up After Placement" form was completed only for clients who were placed by the program and subsequently received follow-up services of any sort. The form was completed for any control group clients who received "normal" program follow-up services as well as for the experimental group clients, who received "special" program follow-up services. The form was completed at three different time periods:

- 30 days after first placement;
- 90 days after first placement; and
- 180 days after first placement.

Additional Definitions

Besides the definitions discussed earlier, in connection with specific forms, several terms appear repeatedly in the various forms:

- DOT occupation codes--These codes were selected from the Dictionary of Occupational Titles, published by the U.S. Government Printing Office. Additionally, a description of the occupation was provided.
- SIC codes--These codes were selected from the Standard Industrial Classification Manual, published by the U.S. Government Printing Office. Codes at the four-digit level were used whenever possible. A description of the industry was also provided.
- Offenses in Uniform Crime Reporting--This list of offenses was used in the reporting of criminal charges. The list appears after the "Mailing Dates."

Modifications

After a trial period with the data collection system, the San Diego and Boston sites requested that Forms C and D be combined into one form and that Form E be abridged. Lazar complied with these requests and the revised forms designated C/D and E* are presented under the category "Modified Forms." Chicago continued to operate using the original system.

INTRODUCTION

The data collection forms prepared for use in evaluation of the ex-offender employment services field test are "event-oriented." When a major event occurs in client processing, a data form is completed that describes the event and summarizes program services delivered since the last major event was reported. For purposes of collecting evaluation data, "major events" are:

- initial program contact ("baseline")—Form C;
- release from prison—Form F;
- release from pre-release center or similar facility—Form I;
- initial placement or dropout—Form G;
- program re-entry and outcome—Form J; and
- program followup after placement, with information summarized at 30, 90, and 180 days after placement—Form H.

In addition to these data, tracking information is needed to assist with the location of clients for the final followup interviews, to be conducted by Lazar after program followup with the clients has ended. Tracking information will be collected at the time of initial program contact or "baseline" (Form D) and will be updated each time a subsequent "major event" occurs and a report on it is submitted (Form E).

A form has also been provided to list all clients in the study and to check off the various reports as they are submitted (Form K). This "Master List" will serve as an overall summary of the number of clients in the study and their status in terms of the "major events" of interest for the study.

Forms should be mailed to Lazar periodically, as shown on the list of "Mailing Dates" that follows this "Introduction." As indicated, forms should be mailed weekly in January, every two weeks in February and monthly thereafter.

A brief description of each form follows. The discussion considers the forms in the order that they appear in this document—roughly the order in which they will be used.

Master List of Clients and Forms—NIJ Field Test—Form K

Each client in the NIJ Field Test should be listed on the Master List. Client Study Identification Numbers should be assigned consecutively, starting with 1, in each site. The assignment of clients to experimental or control groups will be based on the birthdates mechanism, discussed at the management meeting in Chicago in November.

Whenever completed forms on individual clients are mailed to Lazar (see "Mailing Dates"), the Master List of all clients selected for the study as of that time should be forwarded as well. Additionally, the appropriate boxes on the Master List should be checked to indicate all forms that have been mailed to Lazar for each client.

The Master List should help ensure that timely information is provided on each client in the study. Additionally, programs may wish to use the Master List for internal management purposes, to help monitor client progress through the various "major events" in client processing.

Initial Program Contact ("Baseline")—Form C

At the time of a program's initial contact with the client, "baseline" data should be acquired on the client's background (e.g., age, ethnicity, sex, family situation, education, prior training, etc.), work history and criminal history. This form should be completed for all clients in the

NIJ Field Test.

This form, and all subsequent ones, has a cover sheet showing the client's name and Study Identification Number. This sheet will be removed from the form and destroyed after Lazar has double-checked the Client Study Identification Number from the Master List.

Tracking Information Sheet—Initial Program Contact ("Baseline")—Form D

This form should be completed for each client in the NIJ Field Test at the time of the program's initial contact with the client. The form seeks information that could be used to locate a client in order to conduct a followup interview. Because it is impossible to determine in advance the clients who will continue in the program and those who will drop out, it is important that the baseline tracking data be as comprehensive and accurate as possible. Only in this way will Lazar staff be able to locate a high percentage of clients for final followup interviews.

Tracking Information Sheet—Update—Form E

This form should be used to update the information obtained from the client at the time of initial program contact. The form should be completed for each client in the NIJ Field Test each time that a "major event" occurs for evaluation reporting purposes (that is, release from prison; release from pre-release center; initial placement or dropout; program re-entry and outcome; or program followup after placement, summarized at 30, 90 and 180 days after initial placement).

Release From Prison—Form F

The "Release from Prison" form should be completed for each client in the NIJ Field Test. The form summarizes information pertaining to the client's release from prison (e.g., date and conditions of release) and the program's services to the client while-imprisoned. - "Prison" includes both prisons and jails, but does not include pre-release centers or similar facilities.

Release from Pre-Release Center—Form I

This form should be completed only for clients who spend time in a pre-release center or similar facility (e.g., a community-based residential facility, such as a halfway house, where the client is considered "in custody"). A client would enter a pre-release center or similar facility only after serving time in prison.

Initial Placement or Dropout—Form G

The "Initial Placement or Dropout" form should be completed for each client in the NIJ Field Test. The form covers the period after release from prison, a pre-release center or a similar facility until the initial placement or until the client drops out. For purposes of the study, "placement" includes job, training, education or other placements; "dropout" occurs when the client has had no contact with the program during a three-week period.

Program Re-Entry and Outcome—Form J

This form should be completed only for clients who drop out of the program and subsequently re-enter it. The information in the "Program Re-Entry and Outcome" form is identical to that of the "Initial Placement or Dropout" form but applies to the time period after program re-entry until subsequent placement or until the client drops out again. It is important for each program to establish procedures to identify NIJ Field

Test clients who re-enter the program. Such clients should, of course, remain in the Field Test groups to which they were originally assigned (i.e., clients originally in the experimental group would remain in the experimental group when they re-entered the program; similarly, clients originally in the control group would re-enter the program as control group clients). Additionally, they should retain the same Client Study Identification Numbers as originally assigned.

Program Followup After Placement—Form H

The "Program Followup After Placement" form should be completed only for clients who are placed by the program and subsequently receive follow-up services of any sort. The form should be completed for any control group clients who receive "normal" program followup services as well as for the experimental group clients, who receive "special" program follow-up services. The form should be completed at three different time periods:

- 30 days after first placement;
- 90 days after first placement; and
- 180 days after first placement.

Because the form summarizes program activities that occurred over time periods of 30 to 90 days, each program must have procedures for recording followup contacts with clients as those contacts are made.

Additional Definitions

Besides the definitions discussed earlier, in connection with specific forms, several terms appear repeatedly in the various forms:

- DOT occupation codes—These codes should be selected from the Dictionary of Occupational Titles, published by the U.S. Government Printing Office. Additionally, a description of the occupation should be provided. Such descriptions should be as specific as possible (e.g., do not say "factory worker" for a client who operated a tool and die machine).

- SIC codes—These codes should be selected from the Standard Industrial Classification Manual, published by the U.S. Government Printing Office. Codes at the four-digit level should be used whenever possible. A description of the industry should also be provided. Again, as in the case of occupation descriptions, please be as specific as possible.
- Offenses in Uniform Crime Reporting—This list of offenses should be used in the reporting of criminal charges. The list appears after the "Mailing Dates".

Modifications

After a trial period with the data collection system, the San Diego and Boston sites requested that Forms C and D be combined into one form and that Form E be abridged. Lazar complied with these requests and the revised forms designated C/D and E* are presented under the category "Modified Forms." Chicago has continued to operate using the original system.

Excludes attempts to kill, assaults to kill, suicides, accidental deaths, or justifiable homicides. Justifiable homicides are limited to: (1) The killing of a person by a law enforcement officer in line of duty; and (2) The killing of a person in the act of committing a felony by a private citizen. (b) Manslaughter by negligence: Any death which the police investigation established was primarily attributable to gross negligence of some individual other than the victim.
2. FORCIBLE RAPE—The carnal knowledge of a female, forcibly and against her will in the categories of rape by force, assault to rape, and attempted rape. Excludes statutory offenses (no force used—victim under age of consent).
3. ROBBERY—Stealing or taking anything of value from the care, custody, or control of a person by force or violence or by putting in fear, such as strong-arm robbery, stickups, armed robbery, assaults to rob, and attempts to rob.

Thefts of bicycles, automobile accessories, shoplifting, pocket-picking, or any stealing of property or article which is not taken by force and violence or by fraud. Excludes embezzlement, "con" games, forgery, worthless checks, etc.
7. AUTO THEFT—Unlawful taking or stealing or attempted theft of a motor vehicle. A motor vehicle is a self-propelled vehicle that travels on the surface but not on rails. Specifically excluded from this category are motor boats, construction equipment, airplanes, and farming equipment.

The Part II offenses are:

8. OTHER ASSAULTS (SIMPLE)—Assaults which are not of an aggravated nature.

9. ARSON—Willful or malicious burning with or without intent to defraud. Includes attempts.

10. FORGERY AND COUNTERFEITING—Making, altering, uttering or possessing with intent to defraud anything false which is made to appear true. Includes attempts.
