About the National Institute of Justice

The National Institute of Justice is a research branch of the U.S. Department of Justice. The Institute's mission is to develop knowledge about crime, its causes and control. Priority is given to policy-relevant research that can yield approaches and information that State and local agencies can use in preventing and reducing crime. The decisions made by criminal justice practitioners and policymakers affect millions of citizens, and crime affects almost all our public institutions and the private sector as well. Targeting resources, assuring their effective allocation, and developing new means of cooperation between the public and private sector are some of the emerging issues in law enforcement and criminal justice that research can help illuminate.

Carrying out the mandate assigned by Congress in the Justice Assistance Act of 1984, the National Institute of Justice:

- Sponsors research and development to improve and strengthen the criminal justice system and related civil aspects, with a balanced program of basic and applied research.
- Evaluates the effectiveness of justice improvement programs and identifies programs that promise to be successful if continued or repeated.
- Tests and demonstrates new and improved approaches to strengthen the justice system, and recommends actions that can be taken by Federal, State, and local governments, and private organizations and individuals to achieve this goal.
- Disseminates information from research, demonstrations, evaluations, and special programs to Federal, State, and local governments, and serves as an international clearinghouse of justice information.
- Trains criminal justice practitioners in research and evaluation findings, and assists practitioners and researchers through fellowships and special seminars.

The Director of the Institute is appointed by the President of the United States, and upon confirmation by the Senate, serves at the President's pleasure. The Director establishes the research and development objectives of the Institute. The Director has final authority to approve grants, contracts, and cooperative agreements, and maintains responsibility for fiscal operations of the Attorney General and the needs of the criminal justice field. The Institute actively solicits the views of police, courts, and corrections practitioners as well as the private sector to identify the most critical problems and to plan research that can help resolve them.

From the Director

The National Institute of Justice has long worked to foster the exchange of information and to open channels of communication among those involved in criminal justice. As part of this continuing effort, we present this seventh edition of A Network of Knowledge, the Directory of Criminal Justice Information Sources. We urge you to use this book. Call the contact persons listed here when you need information. They represent 167 organizations providing a wealth of resources and services useful to the criminal justice professional.

By providing a centralized listing of these information sources, this Directory can help you meet the criminal justice challenges you face each day.

James K. Stewart
Director

Introduction

The National Institute of Justice/NCJRS published the first edition of the Directory of Criminal Justice Information Sources in 1977. This seventh edition updates previous editions and is based on a 1988 survey of more than 400 criminal justice agencies. Questionnaires were mailed to all agencies listed in the sixth edition (1986) and to additional agencies identified by NCJRS staff.

Criteria for selection

The following guidelines were used to select entries for the Directory:

- The organization provides, as a major function, information services on a national, regional, or statewide basis.
- The organization provides criminal justice-related information as a major function.
- The organization's information services include one or more of the following: data base searches, document dissemination or delivery, practical information on setting up programs, reference services, and technical assistance.
- The organization answers telephone and mail requests.
- Costs for services or membership are not prohibitive or excessively restrictive.

The following types of organizations are not included in the Directory:

- Publishers and agencies that provide only consulting services, technical assistance, or training.
- All foreign-based organizations.

Although every effort was made to contact known criminal justice information sources, this Directory should not be considered exhaustive. Editorial selection requirements, unanswered inquiries, and lack of information may have excluded some sources.

Arrangement of the Directory

The Directory contains information on 167 organizations. Information includes the following:

PUBLICATIONS

The headings for each entry appear only when information is available. If, for example, an organization did not list a telephone number on its response form, the heading TELEPHONE NUMBER(S) does not appear in the entry. Readers have several options for finding specific organizations in the Directory. Entries appear alphabetically by Parent Organization/Sponsoring Agency, with all information centers or libraries under the same Parent Organization/Sponsoring Agency appearing on consecutive pages. Readers may also find particular organizations by using the Information Center/Library, Subject, and Geographic indexes at the end of the Directory. Appendixes also contain the following information:

- o A listing of members of the Criminal Justice Information Exchange (CJIE) group and their addresses.
- o A listing of State criminal justice system representatives.
- o A listing of Federal Information Centers and telephone numbers.

NIJ/NCJRS plans to continue providing biennial updates of the Directory of Criminal Justice Information Sources. Feedback from Directory users will assist us in making this publication more useful. If your agency would like to be listed in the next edition and meets the criteria listed on the previous page, please complete the survey form on page G-1 and mail it to the address below (guidelines for completing the form appear opposite the blank response form):

Appendix A

Criminal Justice Information Exchange (CJIE) Group Members

The Criminal Justice Information Exchange (CJIE) Group is an informal, cooperative association of libraries serving the criminal justice community. The Group fosters communication and cooperation among member libraries and enhances user services. Group members provide information to criminal justice patrons about their collections, policies, and services. The National Institute of Justice/National Criminal Justice Reference Service, a CJIE member, serves as the Group coordinator.
