SUPREME COURT OF ARKANSAS LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS 72201

JACK HOLT, JR. CHIEF JUSTICE

The Honorable Bill Clinton, Governor, Members of the Arkansas General Assembly Fellow Justices and Judges and Fellow Arkansans:

I am pleased to present to you this report of the work of the Arkansas judiciary during fiscal year 1988–89. As this report will document, our state's trial and appellate courts continue to consider record numbers of cases, yet do so with efficiency and relative dispatch.

Changes in jurisdiction for juvenile and paternity matters from county to chancery courts, and the creation of eighteen new trial judgeships by the 1989 General Assembly brought major fundamental changes to our court system. The members of the General Assembly, particularly those members of the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, were extremely helpful and consulted with the judiciary before effectuating these changes. These changes did, however, create a great deal of controversy and uncertainty; even so, our judges, clerks, court reporters, prosecutors, case coordinators, court administrators and other court officials have done an admirable job of assuming additional burdens in taking the necessary action to implement the changes.

I thank and express my appreciation to the trial judges and clerks across the state and to the staff of the Administrative Office of the Courts for their work in compiling the data for this report. It is my hope that it will serve as an aid in our continued attempts to provide a judicial system which is both fair and efficient for all Arkansans.

Jack Holt, Jr. Chief Justice

SUPREME COURT OF ARKANSAS ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICE OF THE COURTS LITTLE ROCK, AR 72201-1078

JAMES D. GINGERICH DIRECTOR

The Honorable Jack Holt, Jr. Chief Justice Arkansas Supreme Court

On behalf of the staff of the Administrative Office of the Courts, I am pleased to present this report of the activities of the Arkansas judiciary for fiscal year 1988–89. This year has brought fundamental changes to our state court system. It is hoped that this overview and the remaining sections of this Annual Report will be of value to you in assessing the impact of those changes in your role as Chief Justice, and to those in the executive and legislative branch as they conduct their deliberations.

Major Events

Juvenile and Paternity Jurisdiction — With the passage of Amendment 67 to the Arkansas Constitution authorizing a change in juvenile and paternity jurisdiction, the 1989 General Assembly adopted major changes in the work and structure of the state's chancery courts. A new juvenile division of chancery court was created as of August 1, 1989, and seventeen new circuit/chancery judgeships were created to handle the additional caseload. In addition, jurisdiction for all paternity cases was moved from county courts to chancery courts.

Judicial Ethics — In November of 1988, Arkansas voters also approved the adoption of Amendment 66 to the Arkansas Constitution to provide for the creation of the Arkansas Judicial Discipline and Disability Commission. The nine member Commission was appointed by the Supreme Court, Governor, Attorney General, and General Assembly and officially began operating on July 1, 1989. The Commission selected Judge Tom Butt, a chancellor from Fayetteville, as chairman. The Commission hired an executive director and will review all complaints of ethics violations or voluntary or involuntary disability concerning judges in Arkansas.

Judicial Council — The Arkansas Judicial Council was ably served during the year by President John Graves, a circuit judge from Camden. One of the major changes in the role of the Judicial Council came with the adoption of Act 864 of 1989. The act requires that the Council develop criteria for the consideration of all requests for new judgeships or judicial redistricting before such requests are considered during any regular or special session of the General Assembly. In response, the Council created a new Judicial Resources Assessment Committee and appointed Judge John Lineberger, a chancellor from Fayetteville, as its chair.

Grants — The Administrative Office of the Courts was very successful during the year in securing private and federal grants to augment the regular state appropriation for the judiciary and carry out special projects. Funds were received from the Arkansas IOLTA Board to hire an individual to write and publish a handbook for municipal court clerks and a deskbook for municipal court judges.

Two grants were awarded to the office by the State Justice Institute. One will allow for a study of the use of voice activated video camera equipment for the making of the trial court record in Jefferson County, Arkansas. The second will allow for the production of two slide shows and educational materials for elementary and secondary school students to assist judges in their attempts to educate children and youth about the Arkansas court system. Federal funds were also received through the Arkansas Juvenile Advisory Group to conduct a special three day conference for the seventeen newly appointed juvenile judges.

Supreme Court Rulings — Several rulings by the Arkansas Supreme Court brought change to the judicial system. In March, the Court handed down Hutton vs. Savage, which declared unconstitutional the use of masters by the state's trial judges. The state had been using masters on a regular basis in several counties to hear juvenile, paternity, and uncontested divorce cases and to handle special proceedings.

In May, the Court abolished the use of Rule 37 of the Arkansas Rules of Criminal Procedure which was the major state remedy for post-conviction relief. Defendants are still able to petition the Court for a writ of habeas corpus.

The Court also adopted two major changes in the procedure for processing appeals. In a per curiam opinion, the Court instituted, on a trial basis, the use of an appeal brief with an attached appendix, rather than a complete abstract of the record. The opinion also announced a change from the use of legal size paper to letter size paper for all trial and appellate court filings. The changes were made "to decrease the cost of appellate litigation, increase the ease of accuracy of the evaluation of cases at the appellate level, and provide uniformity as well as compatibility with the age of the word processor in the case of paper size."

Administrative Changes — As of July 1, 1989, the Arkansas Judicial Department became the Administrative Office of the Courts. The change is consistent with the practice in the majority of states and with nationally recommended standards. The office was also given broader statutory responsibility for the administration of the Arkansas court system.

The 1989 theme chosen by the American Bar Association is "Access to Justice." The events outlined above are only a sampling of the activities which took place within the Arkansas judiciary during fiscal year 1988–89. Each of them represents an attempt by judicial, legislative and executive officials to improve the "Access to Justice" which each of our citizens deserve. The Administrative Office of the Courts is pleased to have been a part of that process. It is hoped that this Annual Report can be a catalyst for future improvement in the year to come.

ARKANSAS' COURT SYSTEM

Historical Development

The Territory of Arkansas was established by an Act of Congress in 1819. The act provided that the President of the United States should appoint a Governor, a Secretary, and three Superior Court Judges to administer the territory's executive, legislative, and judicial affairs. President James Monroe appointed James Miller of New Hampshire as Governor in March of 1819. In August of 1819, the first legislative session was held at Arkansas Post. Two of the six laws which were enacted during the session dealt with the judiciary. One divided the territory into two judicial districts and the other set terms of court for the Superior Court.

The congressional act establishing the territory had vested all judicial power in a three judge Superior Court, inferior courts as established by the legislative department of the territory, and justices of the peace. Superior Court jurisdiction encompassed all cases of law and equity with each Superior Court judge serving as a circuit judge and any two of the three Superior judges sitting as an appeals court. Since the Superior Court had original as well as appellate jurisdiction, both grand and petit juries were integral parts of its operations. The territorial judicial system remained virtually the same from 1819 through 1836, when Arkansas was admitted to the Union.

From the time of statehood to the present constitution of 1874, the state operated under four different constitutions. The judicial branch was structured in basically the same way under each, including a Supreme Court, circuit courts, county courts, and justices of the peace. Under the Confederate Constitution of 1861, probate courts and corporation courts were added to the system. These were abolished under the Unionist Constitution of 1864 in which the legislature was given power to establish courts of chancery.

One main difference between the early constitutions involved the method by which judges were selected. Under the original constitution of 1836, both trial and appellate judges were selected by a majority vote of both Houses of the General Assembly. County judges were selected by a majority vote of the justices of the peace of each county, who were themselves selected by the voters in each township. In 1848, the constitution was amended to provide for direct election of circuit and county judges, with appellate judges remaining subject to election by the legislature. Under the 1861 Constitution, voters continued to elect county and circuit judges, but judges of the Supreme Court were appointed by the Governor with confirmation by the Senate. With the adoption of the 1864 constitution, all judges were selected by direct election. However, this was short-lived as the constitution of 1868 provided for gubernatorial appointment of the Chief Justice and all inferior court judges and direct election of the four Associate Justices of the Supreme Court.

The Present Court System

The Constitution of 1874 established the Arkansas judiciary as we know it today. Under Section 1 of Article 7, the judicial power is "vested in one Supreme Court, in circuit courts, in county and probate courts, and in justices of the peace." The section further provides that the General Assembly may establish jurisdiction in municipal corporation courts, courts of common pleas, and separate courts of chancery.

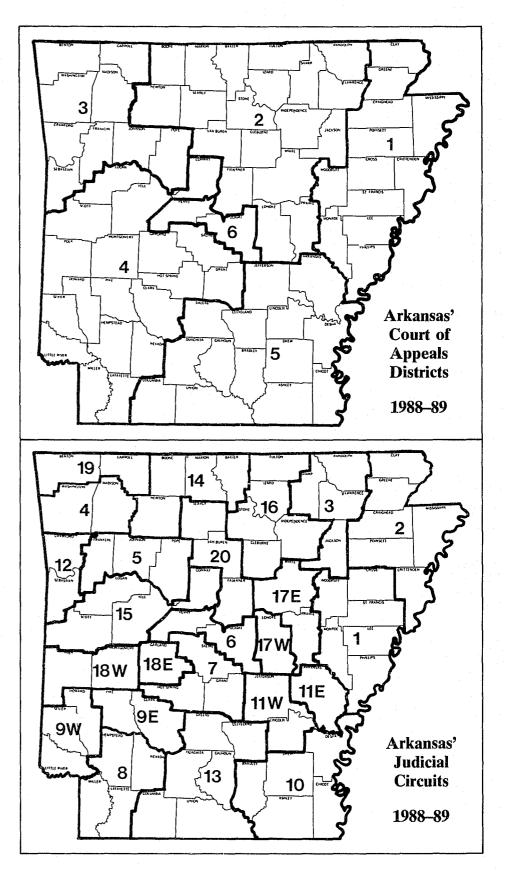

Membership of the Supreme Court was set at three members with a provision that two additional justices could be added when the state's population reached one million. When this figure was reached in 1889, the legislature authorized the increase to five members. By 1923, the workload of the Supreme Court had exceeded the Court's capacity and in that year Amendment 9 was adopted which authorized the enlargement of its membership to its present six justices and one Chief Justice. Members of the court are elected in statewide elections for an eight year term. The Governor is responsible for filling any vacancies on the Court by appointment. The Court hears all of the more serious appeals from the state's circuit and chancery courts, as designated by Supreme Court Rule 29. It also hears a limited number of cases from the Court of Appeals.

Amendment 58 to the Arkansas Constitution authorized the General Assembly to establish an intermediate appellate court known as the Court of Appeals. The Court was established and began operation in 1979. This Court is composed of a Chief Judge and five Associate Judges. Each of the judges are elected for eight year terms from one of six geographical districts.

The Court sits in two panels of three judges with any decision by a panel being final unless a single judge dissents. In these cases, the decision is reached "en banc" by the full Court. Judgments of the Court of Appeals may be appealed to the Supreme Court when any one of three circumstances exist: (1) The case was erroneously filed in the Court of Appeals, (2) a case filed in the Court of Appeals is believed to be of paramount public interest and is "certified" to the Supreme Court, or (3) the case was decided in a tie vote in the Court of Appeals.

Arkansas remains one of three states in the union which maintains separate courts of law and equity. Judges of courts of law are designated as circuit judges and those of courts of equity are designated chancellors. In general, circuit courts have jurisdiction for all civil and criminal matters and hear appeals from courts of limited jurisdiction. Chancery courts have jurisdiction for cases involving domestic relations, land disputes, support actions, and other cases where equitable relief is sought. Chancellors also serve as judges of the probate court and hear cases involving wills, guardianships, adoptions, mental commitments, and related matters. Beginning in 1989, the chancery court will also be responsible for juvenile cases. Circuit judges are elected to the bench by the voters of the respective judicial circuits every four years and chancellors are elected to a term of six years. All judges are elected from one of twenty-four circuits.

Courts of limited jurisdiction in Arkansas are of six types, each possessing somewhat over-lapping jurisdiction. They consist of municipal courts, county courts, courts of common pleas, police courts, city courts, and justice of the peace courts. The municipal courts are the principle courts of limited jurisdiction and the only ones in which the judge is required to be an attorney. The courts have county-wide jurisdiction over misdemeanor cases, preliminary felony cases, and civil cases in matters of less than $3,000.

Funding of the Judiciary

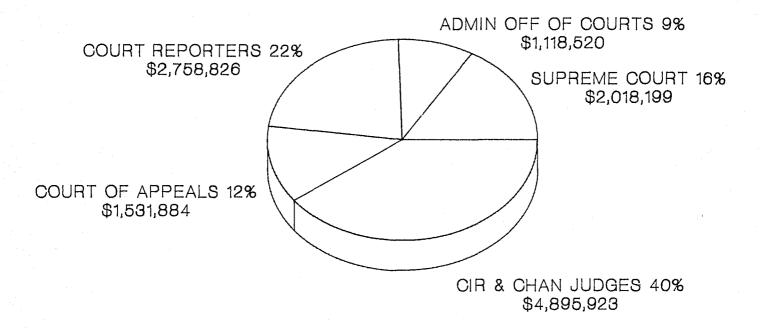

Arkansas courts are financed through state, county and city appropriations. The degree of funding from each source depends upon the level of jurisdiction of the court being funded. State government is the sole funding source for the Supreme Court, Court of Appeals, appellate court support staff, Supreme Court Law Library, and the Administrative Office of the Courts. In addition, the state funds the salaries and costs of travel and educational assistance for circuit and chancery judges, and the salaries for court reporters. State government has budgeted for its portion of the cost of the court system for fiscal year 88–89, a total of $12,323,352. The operating funds apportioned to the courts at this level represent .12% of the total state government operating appropriations in fiscal year 88–89.

County government is the funding source for the salaries of all circuit, chancery and probate court support and clerical staff and for all supplies, equipment, utilities and facilities within each judicial circuit.

Each county within the circuit provides funding according to its pro rata share of the district-wide court expenses and is solely responsible for the costs of facilities and utilities within the county. County government pays all expenses of the county court, court of common pleas, and justice of the peace courts. The county government also shares with city government the cost of the municipal court. The county share is usually 50%, but there are numerous exceptions to this pattern in a variety of locally negotiated arrangements.

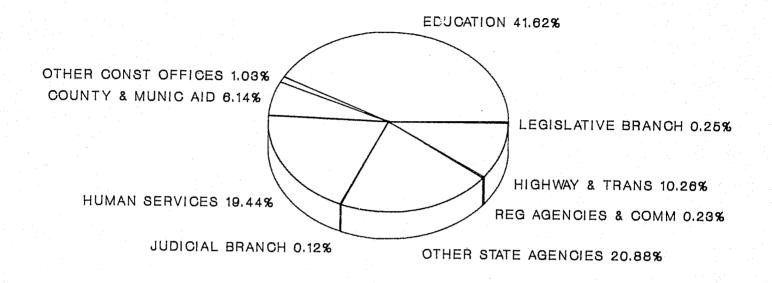

City government is responsible for the remainder of municipal court expenses not provided by county government and provides the sole support for city and police courts.

The Arkansas Supreme Court has for many years had one of the nation's heaviest caseloads. The creation of the Court of Appeals in 1978 greatly eased the burden, but the number of appeals has continued to grow since that time.

The workload of the Court is measured in terms of appeals, petitions and motions (excluding those for time extension) of which final dispositions are made during the fiscal year.

Appeals filed in the Supreme Court totaled 443 for the 1988–89 fiscal year. an increase of 10.75% from the previous year. Appeals terminated during the year totaled 416, a decrease of 8.97%. Petitions filed for the same time period numbered 375, a decrease of 10.50% from the previous fiscal year. Petitions terminated during the fiscal year totaled 382, a decrease of 7.95%.

There were 176 appeals and 40 petitions pending at the end of fiscal year 1988–89. The 176 appeals pending represent a 17.33% increase from the previous fiscal year while the 40 petitions represent a 14.9% decrease.

Appellate workload is also measured by the number of opinions written by each justice during the year. In fiscal year 1988–89, Supreme Court justices averaged a total of 48.2 majority opinions, 7.5 concurring opinions and 17.9 dissenting opinions. This represents a small decrease from the number of opinions written in 1987–88.

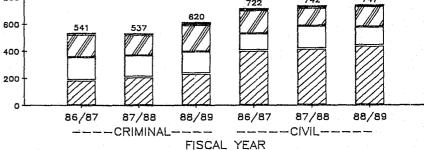

Supreme Court Time Study

Each year a sample of cases is surveyed in an attempt to measure the amount of time required to process a case through the court system.

For the 1988–89 fiscal year a total of 70 criminal cases was surveyed. Twelve of these cases were decided after oral argument. An average of 620 days was required to process an average case from the filing in the lower court through appeal. Of the 58 cases surveyed without oral argument, an average of 520 days elapsed from the initial filing to the final decision by the Supreme Court.

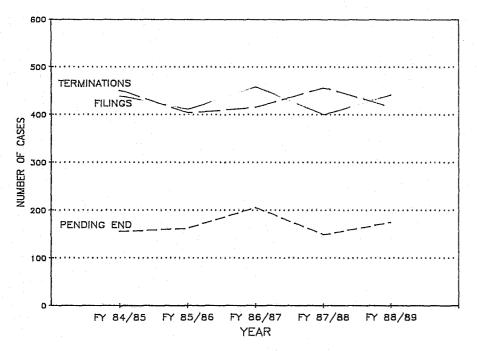

A total of 171 civil cases was surveyed for the 1988-89 fiscal year. Forty-one of these cases were decided after oral argument. An average of 767 days was required to process each case from the filing in the lower court through appeal. Of the 130 cases surveyed without oral arguments, an average of 747 days elapsed from the initial filing to the final decision by the Supreme Court.

On average, approximately 70% of the time taken to process each case was spent in the lower trial court. The remaining 30% of the time was spent in the Supreme Court.

ARKANSAS COURT OF APPEALS

Since its creation in 1978, the Arkansas Court of Appeals has provided major relief for the tremendous increase in appeals which challenged the Arkansas court system during the 1970's.

The workload of the Court of Appeals is measured by the number of appeals, petitions and motions considered by the court during the fiscal year.

Appeals filed during 1988–89 totaled 1079, a increase of 20.02% from the previous fiscal year. Appeal terminations for the year were 978, an increase of 18.26% from the previous fiscal year.

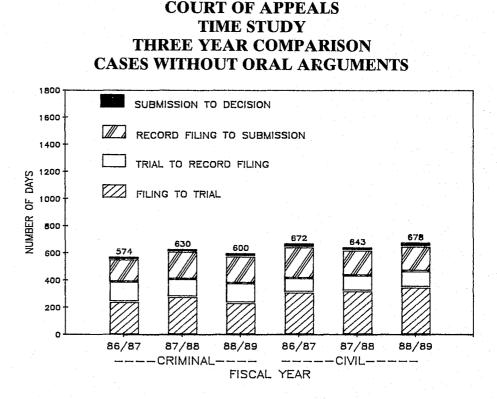

Eighty-three petitions were filed during 1988–89, representing a decrease of 24.55% from the previous reporting period. Petition terminations for the year decreased by 21.82% from 110 to 86. There were 623 appeals and 4 petitions pending at the end of the fiscal year. The 623 appeals pending represent a 19.35% increase from the previous fiscal year, while the 4 petitions represent a 42.86% decrease.

Workload is also measured by the number of opinions written by each judge. In 1988–89, each member of the Court of Appeals averaged 105 majority opinions, 2 concurring opinions and 4.6 dissenting opinions. This is a substantial increase from the average of 94.8 majority opinions written the previous fiscal year.

Court of Appeals Time Study

For 1988–89, 206 criminal cases were surveyed. Fifteen of these were decided after oral argument. It required an average of 658 days to process each case from filing in the lower court through appeal. Of the 191 cases surveyed without oral argument, an average of 600 days elapsed from filing in the circuit court to the decision by the Court of Appeals.

A total of 332 civil cases was surveyed during 1988–89. Forty-nine of these cases were decided after oral argument. An average of 696 days was required to process each case from filing in the lower court through appeal. Of the 283 cases surveyed without oral argument, an average of 678 days elapsed from the filing to the final decision.

COURTS OF GENERAL JURISDICTION

The total caseload in Arkansas' general jurisdiction courts contained a trend of a number of years of steady increase. In fiscal year 1988-89, 128,603 cases were filed, representing an increase of 11.7% from the previous year. Most of that increase was the result of a dramatic rise in criminal filing of almost 36%, and despite a decrease in the number of civil filings. The increases were also effected by the transfer of juvenile cases from the county court to the circuit and chancery courts. The percentage of increase in the circuit and chancery courts can be broken down as follows:

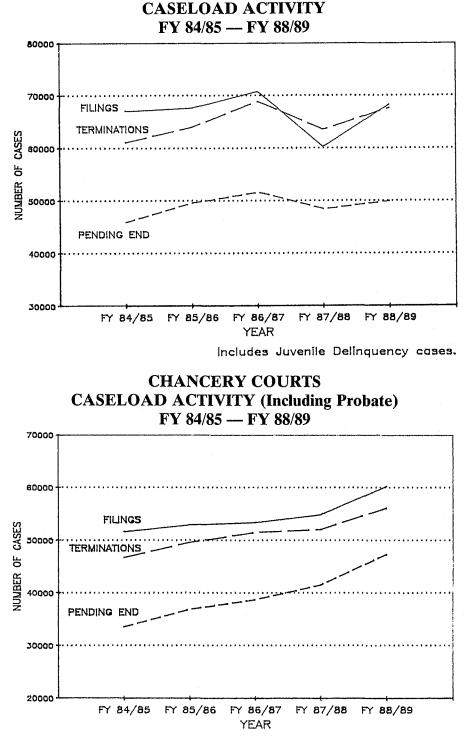

Cases Filed	FY 8889	FY 87–88	% Increase or Decrease
Civil	24,998	28,356	-11.8
Criminal	43,355	31,905	35.9

Probate	12,111	11,798	2.6
Total-all courts	128,603	115,152	11.7

The courts of general jurisdiction terminated a total of 123,829 cases during this fiscal year, an increase of 7.1% from the previous fiscal year.

Cases Terminated	FY 88-89	FY 87–88	% Increase or Decrease

Probate	9,286	9,399	-1.2
Total-all
courts	123,829	115,607	7.1

The disposition rate compares the number of terminations to the number of filings. The disposition rate for courts of general jurisdiction was 96.3%, an average of 1,628 terminations per judge. (See the disposition rates by circuit in the statistical section on page 79.)

There were 97,432 cases pending in the courts of general jurisdiction

Processing Times

The chart below compares the processing times for Arkansas' general jurisdiction courts. Processing time is defined as the average time it takes for a case or group of cases to be processed by the court system from filing to disposition. Time is expressed in months. The chart compares fiscal years 87–88 and 88–89. (Note that the figures presented here are statewide averages. Processing times may vary widely by case and/or judicial circuit.)

Generally, felony criminal case processing time has increased negligibly, and civil case processing time has increased slightly in non-jury matters. In chancery court, case processing time has increased slightly, except for noncontested matters.

FIRST CIRCUIT

Present Organization

The First Judicial Circuit is located in the eastern part of the state and is composed of Cross, Lee, Monroe, Phillips, St. Francis and Woodruff Counties. The circuit spans a total of 3,748 square miles and serves a population of 127,801.

Personnel

The First Circuit is served by two circuit judges and two chancellors. One judge has a part-time bailiff, but in this circuit there are no direct support personnel other than court reporters.

Caseload Summary

In fiscal year 1988–89, 5668 cases were filed in the First Circuit general jurisdiction courts, representing an increase of 1.1% from the previous fiscal year. The percentage of increase in the circuit and chancery courts can be broken down as follows:

CHANCERY COURT CASELOAD ACTIVITY TWENTIETH CIRCUIT FY 84/85 — FY 88/89

Includes Probate, JuvenTie JINS and Neglect cases.

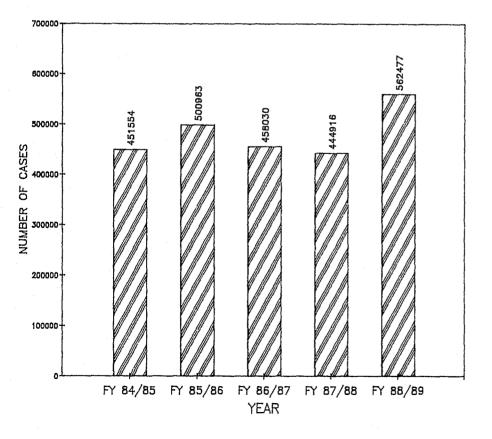

COURTS OF LIMITED JURISDICTION

Perhaps the most important and yet most neglected segment of our state court system is that comprising our courts of limited jurisdiction. It is before these courts that the vast majority of the public receives its first and sometimes only impression of the Arkansas Judicial System. The establishment of limited jurisdiction courts is authorized by both the Arkansas Constitution and action of the General Assembly. At present, these courts include municipal courts, county courts, courts of common pleas, city courts, police courts, and justice of the peace courts.

MUNICIPAL COURTS

Municipal courts in the State of Arkansas constitute the principle courts of limited jurisdiction and have county-wide jurisdiction. The courts are served in most cases by part-time judges who handle the vast majority of all cases filed in limited jurisdiction courts. At present, there are 121 municipal courts in the state headed by 108 judges and assisted by 125 clerks. During fiscal year 1988-89, the courts reported 562,477 cases filed, an increase of some 26.4%.

MUNICIPAL COURT FILINGS FY 84/85 - FY 88/89

COUNTY CLERKS

The county judge presides over the county court and is also the chief executive officer of the county. Jurisdiction of county courts include matters relating to county taxes, bastardy cases, paupers, apprenticeship of minors, and in the absence of the chancellor, the power to issue writs of injunction or restraining orders after an action has commenced. In the absence of the circuit judge, the county judge has the power to issue orders for injunction. As of March, 1989, all bastardy cases will be transferred to chancery courts and as of July 1, 1989, juvenile cases will be transferred.

COURTS OF COMMON PLEAS

The Arkansas General Assembly has authorized thirteen counties in the state to establish courts of common pleas. These courts are presided over by the county judge and are limited to civil actions in which the disputed amount does not exceed $1,000. The courts are mostly of historical importance with very few cases reported from year to year.

CITY COURTS

There are currently 93 city courts established in the state which are the main courts of limited jurisdiction in those communities which do not have a municipal court. They may be established in cities with a population of less than 2,400. The courts exercise city-wide jurisdiction and are presided over by the mayor of the city acting as judge. City courts are served by 76 judges and assisted by 97 clerks. judge, rather than as an executive officer. Presently, there are 5 police courts active in the state.

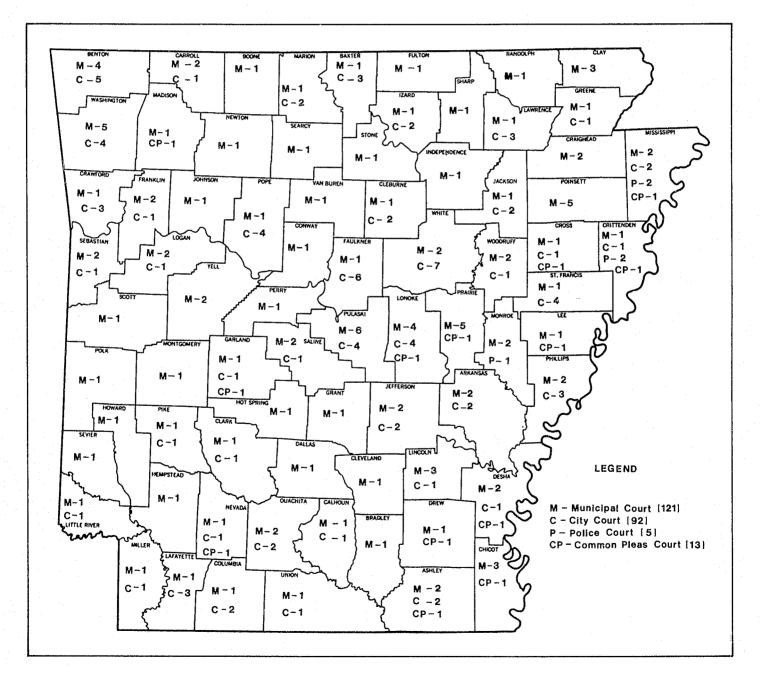

POLICE COURTS

Jurisdiction of police courts is similar to that of the city court, but the police court judge is elected as a

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE COURTS

With the reorganization of county government pursuant to Arkansas

Constitutional Amendment 55, justices of the peace function primarily as the legislative officers of the county. The Arkansas Constitution still provides for limited judicial powers in justices of the peace. For the past several years, however, there have been no cases handled by justices of the peace in the State of Arkansas.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE ARKANSAS COURT SYSTEM

The administration of the Arkansas Court System is accomplished by a combination of state, county and local officials. A partial unification of the court system occurred in 1965, when the General Assembly adopted Act 496 in which the Chief Justice was designated as the administrative director of the judicial branch of government. The act further provided that "the Arkansas Supreme Court shall have general superintending control over the administration of justice in all courts in the State of Arkansas. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court shall be directly responsible for the efficient operation of the judicial branch and of its constituent courts and for the expeditious dispatch of litigation therein and the proper conduct of the business of the courts." In aid of this responsibility, the Chief Justice may appoint a Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts, such appointment to be approved by the Arkansas Judicial Council and the remaining members of the Supreme Court.

THE ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICE OF THE COURTS

The Administrative Office of the Courts (formerly the Arkansas Judicial Department) is the administrative office for the non-judicial business of the state courts. The office is responsible for collecting and managing statistical data from all levels of the court, providing assistance to all courts for computer and telecommunication needs, conducting judicial education programs for judges and other court personnel, acting as a legislative liaison for the judiciary, monitoring the fiscal affairs of the state courts, operating the Supreme Court Library, and other general administrative duties. The office provides special services for deaf interpretation and translation, general legal research, juvenile court services, and funds special magistrate programs for mental health and foster care cases.

ARKANSAS JUDICIAL COUNCIL, INC.

The Arkansas Judicial Council consists of all justices of the Supreme Court, judges of the Court of Appeals, judges of the circuit and chancery courts, and retired judges. While the Council has no special statutory authority, it acts as the general body representing the state's judiciary. The Council was organized "to foster and preserve the integrity, dignity, and independence of the judiciary: to promote uniformity and dispatch in judicial administration; to develop, implement and maintain a program of judicial education for assisting members newly elected or appointed to the bench; to provide continuing judicial education for members accommodating the diverse needs of chancellors, circuit judges, and appellate justices; and to select members to the Judicial Retirement Board." Formal business of the Council is conducted in its spring and fall meeting each year. The director of the Administrative Office of the Courts also serves as the secretary/treasurer of the Judicial Council.

APPELLATE COURT SUPPORT STAFF

Each justice of the Supreme Court and judge of the Court of Appeals is provided two law clerks and a secretary to assist in the day to day operation of his or her office. Law clerks assist the judges in all phases of appellate work. They prepare memoranda on the cases submitted to the Court in which they research and evaluate the issues raised by the parties. After cases have been discussed by the justices in conference, the clerks may assist in opinion drafting and conduct additional research. In addition to their law clerks, judges of the Court of Appeals also employ general staff attorneys. The staff attorneys assist the entire court by classifying and calendaring cases and may also aid in an analysis of cases and arrange for the Court to expeditiously deal with cases previously resolved. Staff attorneys also review case files to insure the pleadings are in order and insure that procedural rules have been met.

OFFICE OF THE CLERK OF THE SUPREME COURT

The Office of the Supreme Court Clerk assists in the filing and processing of cases for both the Supreme Court and Court of Appeals. All appeals are filed in the office and docketed for either the Supreme Court or Court of Appeals. The Clerk then monitors progress of all appeals, maintains calendars, schedules oral arguments, reviews briefs for compliance with the appellate court rules, records court decisions, and controls their release and distribution. In addition, the Clerk is responsible for collecting and recording attorneys' fees for licensing.

SUPREME COURT LIBRARIAN

The Supreme Court Library is located within the Justice Building. Although the library is open to all members of the public, it is used mainly by members of the Supreme Court and Court of Appeals and members of their staff. The library contains all case materials and statutes from Arkansas and other states and maintains an extensive collection of treatise materials, legal periodicals, legal encyclopedias, and other law related materials.

TRIAL COURT ADMINISTRATION

There is no uniform administration of Arkansas trial courts. General assistance is provided to these courts by the Administrative Office of the Courts. Any local administration of the trial court is dependent upon assistance and funding from county and local government. For this reason, some trial judges are blessed with a fairly large and experienced staff, while others are left even to do their own typing. All trial judges are provided a court reporter whose salary is paid by the State of Arkansas. County funds are used to pay the salaries of local court administrators, case coordinators, secretaries, bailiffs, and probation officers.

CIRCUIT AND COUNTY CLERKS

Arkansas trial courts are also served by two categories of clerks, circuit clerks and county clerks. These clerks are elected by the voters of each county for a term of two years. The circuit clerks are also designated as the clerks of the chancery courts. All clerks perform the duties incidental to their office such as filing and maintaining all legal documents, preparing and maintaining docket books, issuing notices and writs, and filing statistical data reports with the Administrative Office of the Courts.

TABLE 15 MUNICIPAL AND CITY COURT STATEWIDE STATISTICS

*Due to the variety of dispositions in limited jurisdiction courts, it is difficult to ascertain precise disposition figures.

Note: The following five municipal courts did not report for the 1988-89 fiscal year: Hamburg, Heber Springs, Osceola, Pine Bluff, and West Fork.

A total of 23 municipalities reported for a partial year.
