Recommended "Non-Book" Library Materials

NEWSBANK, THE URBAN AFFAIRS LIBRARY, Arcata Microfilm, Graphics Systems Division, Cleveland, Ohio 44131

A data base of firsthand news reports selected from 200 newspapers covering the nation's major cities. Published on 4" x 6" microfiche cards in a self-contained library--updated on a monthly basis and professionally indexed for immediate retrieval.

This urban affairs data source will contain an annual cumulation of about 2,000 microfiche cards covering over 70,000 news reports on twelve subjects of vital national concern--individually organized and indexed under the following headings:

1. Education
2. Environment
3. Welfare and Poverty
4. Law and Order
5. Political Development
6. Housing and Urban Renewal
7. Race Relations
8. Employment
9. Health
10. Minority Economic Development
11. Government Structure
12. Transportation

The NewsBank microfiche library consists exclusively of primary source material--news stories and articles selected from a cross section of America's leading newspapers. 200 papers from coast to coast are covered including dailies from over 40 major cities. Special interest, ethnic papers and the Black press are also represented.

These 200 newspapers are monitored on a daily and/or weekly basis by a team of carefully chosen research editors. Articles are selected for their importance and pertinence--with the objective of obtaining a broad range of viewpoints.

Libraries subscribing to NewsBank/data source will receive an initial research reservoir, covering the first six months of the year--which contains approximately 25,000 news articles on microfiche cards. Thus the library is provided with an initial data base for immediate use. NewsBank/data source will then be updated on a monthly basis. The data file will continually grow to provide a comprehensive and in-depth source of primary information on the significant events of our time.

WESTINGHOUSE LEARNING DIRECTORY, 1970-71, Westinghouse Learning Corporation,
100 Park Avenue, New York, New York 10017

Westinghouse Learning Corporation has issued its first catalog of educational materials, ranging from complete courses and training programs to specific tapes, books and other teaching materials.

Included in the catalog is the Learning Directory, a new, computer-developed single-source reference for educational materials, including both print and non-print media. The seven-volume Learning Directory lists information on over 200,000 items in 600,000 separate entries from some 1000 sources. It enables educators and librarians to consult a single reference work for available instructional material for primary through college grades in a variety of media on almost any topic.

Among the teaching programs listed in the catalog are individualized courses in English Composition and General Psychology, specifically designed to meet the needs of teaching today's heterogeneous college student body with its wide variations in ability, potential, interest and preparation. The flexible systems enable the instructor and each student to tailor the course to meet specific needs, and enables the student to proceed at his own speed.

The basic industrial vocational shop series includes self-instructional courses in basic electricity, hand tools, basic measuring instruments, shop safety, blueprint reading, and basic mathematics.

An operator training program for basic arc welding and advanced arc welding both combine audiovisual lessons, with tests and trainee workbooks. Both use a basically self-instructional approach to learning.

Twenty-one audio tapes describing the sounds, personalities and events of the 20th Century are listed by Westinghouse Learning's Audio Visual Education Division. Included are series expanding on contemporary social problems, such as the Pollution Explosion, Addiction in America, Venereal Disease, Crime and Punishment and The Election Game.

Other series cover the history of World War II, and 20th Century United States and World History. Included here are the voices and sounds of World War II, a history of Pop Music, "The Great Ones--Black History" and "USSR--Half Century of Power."

Three new audio releases include an examination of poverty in America, "John F. Kennedy--Martin Luther King--Robert F. Kennedy, Personal Tributes," and the Peace Corps in Africa.

Readings in the Plays of Shakespeare, by Dr. Frank C. Baxter, with extensive instructive commentary include Romeo and Juliet, Twelfth Night, Hamlet and The Tempest.

A post-educational program for working engineers and scientists has been developed on the theory and practical application of applied statistics. The multi-media program, designed for on-site professional development, combines closely integrated film lectures, texts and problem material in a flexible, self-instruction program.

The materials described in the Westinghouse catalog all center on the organization's commitment to individualized instruction. This is exemplified by the publication's cover that quotes Plato:

"When two do the same thing it is never quite the same thing."

Recommended Law Enforcement Series Publications

ESSENTIALS OF LAW ENFORCEMENT SERIES, Edited by James D. Stinchcomb, Prentice-Hall, Inc., Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey

ESSENTIALS OF LAW ENFORCEMENT is designed primarily for the recruit (basic) level law enforcement officer. It is ideal for use in department or academy training programs as supplementary material to reinforce lectures and locally developed information. The series also can serve as the major source of written instruction for new personnel. At the college level, the volumes can supplement classroom texts to give the students an appreciation of the realities and techniques of a law enforcement career today.

A Basic Reprint Library: FOUNDATIONS OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE, AMS Press, Inc.,
56 East 13th Street, New York, New York 10003 (available winter, 1971-72)

About the series: Taken together the books in this series form a basic library in the newly emerging field of Criminal Justice and its constituent disciplines. Singly, they represent works hitherto scarce yet eminently worthy of reprinting in the durable standards that prevail today.

Each work has been carefully chosen by specialists with experience ranging from the West Coast to the Home Office in London. The books have or will have prefatory material to establish their original context and present application.

The various categories of the Series reflect the scope of the subject. Altogether, they make up a unified body of literature indispensable to those interested in the modern origins of and developments in the system of criminal justice.
