APPENDICES

- A. Statistical Factors Affecting the Transfer of Municipal Court Jurisdiction
- B. Personnel and Court Location Detail, Transfer of Municipal Court Jurisdiction

Summary of Significant Findings

- 1. In order to alleviate the problems associate: with the transfer of municipal court jurisdiction to the unified court system, the work loads of the associate district judges and district magistrates should be equalized based on administrative assignment. Since the work load of municipal courts would be absorbed at this level, it is necessary to utilize judicial manpower most effectively in order to minimize the effects of the transfer of municipal jurisdiction.
- 2. A total of 369 municipal courts have been identified in Kansas. These courts handled 222,631 cases in 1974.
- 3. Eighty-five percent of the municipal court caseload is traffic related. Eighty-five percent of all cases are disposed of by guilty pleas.
- 4. Municipal court operations can be consolidated from the present 369 courts into 120 locations.
- 5. A total of 565 employees have been identified in municipal courts. These employees, however, are basically part-time in that only 152.262 full-time equivalent employees are in evidence.
- 6. Full-time clerical and support personnel in municipal courts should be retained if this jurisdiction is transferred to the State.
- 7. It is estimated that 16 new judgeships would have to be created to absorb the transfer of municipal court jurisdiction to the State.
- 8. The State's share of municipal court revenues based on the formula set up in Senate Bill 284 would be $781,590 based upon current caseloads.
- 9. A uniform statistical and financial reporting system should be developed for municipal courts.

INTRODUCTION

The material presented herein is a companion report to Kansas Courts—A Personnel Inventory and Financial Analysis and relates basically to the transfer of municipal court jurisdiction to the unified district courts as proposed by Senate Bill No. 284. This bill, as introduced in the 1975 legis—lative session, provides that on January 10, 1977, the municipal courts of the cities of Kansas would be abolished and that jurisdiction over violations of city ordinances would become vested in district courts. The bill further provides that all books, records, file documents, and ther materials belonging to any city's municipal court shall be transferred to the district court at the location within the county in which such city is located as determined by the administrative judge of such district court (emphasis supplied). Further, the administrative judge of each judicial district may designate additional locations in each county within such judicial district for the hearing and disposition of such cases.

To accomplish the transfer of jurisdiction from municipal courts to the district courts, various constraints must be considered. Among these are:

- The distance of the district court from the municipalities whose courts have been absorbed. Distance affects the public in relation to the travel time involved in getting to and from the district court which hears their traffic or ordinance violation. In like manner, the amount of time spent by law enforcement officials in travel and testifying on cases must be considered when courts are located some distance from the municipality whose violation is charged.
- The availability of adequate facilities where it is determined that court sessions should be held at locations other than the county seat.
- The ability of the existing courthouse to absorb additional caseload and processing personnel.
- The abolition or phase-out of municipal courts and the resultant effect on municipal court revenues and, therefore, the municipal budget.

- Arrangements for the retention of full-time municipal court employees in those locations having substantial caseloads.
- An analysis of the proposed percentages set forth in Senate Bill No. 284 of revenues left with the municipal courts and those accruing to the State in relation to the facilities provided by the municipalities and the personal services costs which would be paid by the State.

Two separate but related questions are present with regard to the transfer of municipal court jurisdiction.

1. Since no provision is made in Senate Bill 284 for the transfer of municipal court personnel with the transfer of jurisdiction, some method must be devised for the hearing of municipal cases. In most instances, smaller municipalities employ only a part-time judge who may also act as his own clerk or may have municipal court clerical services provided by a city employee. At the other end of the spectrum are the larger municipalities, where bench time is more extensive and full-time clerical support is available.

Senate Bill 284 makes only one statement with regard to the transfer of such jurisdiction. It states in part "... the Supreme Court shall examine the need for additional associate district judge positions and district magistrate positions in each judicial district due to the vesting of jurisdiction over violations of city ordinances in the district court. . ."

Thus, in order to provide for the hearing of such matters, one must examine the existing status of judicial manpower in courts of limited jurisdiction in each county, the current caseload of these courts, and the impact of an increase in caseload brought about by the transfer of municipal court jurisdiction.

2. The second problem relating to the transfer of municipal court jurisdiction is that of court location and the availability and appropriateness of courtroom facilities. The ideal situation would be to transfer municipal court jurisdiction to the courthouse in the county seat for the county wherein the municipality is located. In most instances, this is feasible--especially where travel distances are not unreasonable and municipal caseload is minimal. Where these factors are not present, the question becomes more difficult since one must then be concerned with a "branch court" operation with a full-time traveling judge to hear cases.

I. ASSESSING THE IMPACT OF THE TRANSFER OF MUNICIPAL COURT JURISDICTION

For purposes of assessing the impact of the transfer of municipal court jurisdiction, the following factors were considered:

- 1. Existing judicial (judge) manpower in the courts of limited jurisdiction were reviewed and noted on the map of Kansas judicial districts. This is shown on Exhibit A.
- 2. The district magistrate or associate district judge positions as per Senate Bill 284 were noted on the map of Kansas judicial districts. This is shown on Exhibit B.
- 3. In every county, the judicial manpower is exactly the same as before. The major exceptions as provided in the pending legislation are:
  - Leavenworth County--one less position
  - Wyandotte County--two additional positions
  - Johnson County -- three additional positions
  - Shawnee County -- two additional positions
  - Sedgwick County -- two additional positions
- 4. For purposes of comparison and for relating caseload to judicial manpower, the assumption being made is that, based on pending legislation, the district magistrate (or associate district judge where there is no district magistrate) will be responsible for hearing and disposing of municipal court cases. This caseload will be in addition to the existing caseload in courts of limited jurisdiction in the county. Thus, the following factors were analyzed:
  - a. The summary of business handled in the probate and juvenile areas was utilized. Specifically, incidents were counted in the following categories:
    - Estates of decedents -- closed during year
    - Guardianships and conservatorships closed during year
    - Trusts under supervision
    - Juvenile cases
    - Habeas corpus hearings

- o Orders in absence of district judge
- Adoption proceedings
- o Care and treatment proceedings
- o Determination of descent
- Miscellaneous
- e loreign transcripts
- b. In addition, total civil and total criminal cases for each county court, city court, magistrate court, or court of common pleas, as the case may be, were also included in the total caseload for each county.

These caseloads are summarized in Exhibit C.

- 5. Where a judge who currently handles municipal court jurisdiction has been designated as a district magistrate or associate district judge, the impact of the transfer of jurisdiction is not evident because there is no change in the judicial manpower picture. In like manner, where an existing judge in a court of limited jurisdiction also handles one or more municipal courts now, the impact of the transfer would be minimal.
- 6. In some counties, a measure of court consolidation is already in evidence. Twenty-eight judges in courts of limited jurisdiction hear municipal court cases. These 28 judges at the county level are hearing cases for 37 municipalities. Further, some existing municipal judges already hear cases for neighboring municipalities. Eleven judges hear cases for two municipalities, three judges hear cases for three municipalities, and one judge hears cases for five municipalities.

II. THE NATURE AND EXTENT OF CASELOAD IN COURTS OF LIMITED JURISDICTION

The transfer of municipal court jurisdiction will have the most visible impact on the judges in the courts of limited jurisdiction. That is to say, the municipal caseload, where absorbed into a county seat location, will be in addition to the cases already being processed by probate/juvenile courts or combinations thereof and by the city courts, magistrate courts, and the court of common pleas.

An analysis of caseloads in courts of limited jurisdiction indicates that there are wide disparities between the work loads of judges in the various counties. Exhibit C and Appendix A indicate that the caseload per judge ranges from 137 to 5,670 annually. An average caseload is calculated at 1,691 cases per judge annually. If the extremely high and extremely low caseloads are discounted, a middle range of 542 to 2,050 annual cases per judge is established with a median annual caseload of 1,059 cases per judge.

Of first priority then is the utilization of district magistrate judges and associate district judges within their districts so that work loads are equalized. This, of course, will involve travel throughout the district to the courthouses where judicial business is most prevalent. Judicial manpower must be utilized effectively, and effective utilization requires the assignment of judges to heavy work load areas in order to equalize work load and expedite the handling of judicial business.

This problem is mentioned because it further complicates the transfer and handling of the municipal court caseload. If municipal cases are added to an unbalanced and unequally shared caseload in the courts of limited jurisdiction, this lack of balance becomes even more gravely aggravated.

It is not known at this time just exactly what level of caseload a judge in a court of limited jurisdiction can adequately handle in a 40-hour workweek. More analyses are required to properly relate time spent to work load. The raw caseload numbers, however, do indicate the disparity and provide a framework for future analysis and interim staffing arrangements. Based on existing data, there are certain locations where judicial manpower appears thin in relation to existing caseload. It is recommended that serious consideration be given to the creation of additional district magistrate positions in Lyon County (5,642 cases per judge), Douglas County (5,112 cases per judge), the 9th Judicial District (3,513 cases per judge), and Reno County (4,227 cases per judge). These additions would seem reasonable in that work load shifting or sharing with other judges or magistrates is impossible because of the now limited judicial manpower available within the particular judicial district. (See Exhibit C.)

III. THE NATURE AND EXTENT OF MUNICIPAL COURT CASELOAD

Municipal courts are by and large traffic courts for the municipalities they serve. A sampling of collected statistics indicates that 85 percent of the total caseload in these courts is traffic related. The remaining 15 percent are nontraffic ordinance violation cases. Further, of the total cases handled, 85 percent are disposed of by guilty plea.

Caseloads are set forth by class of city in Exhibit D and by city, county, and judicial district in Appendix A. Additional tables show municipal cases per 100 population for representative municipalities (Exhibit E) and an overall standard based upon population ranges (Exhibit F). Where data was unavailable, estimates based on rates computed in Exhibit F were used to project caseloads for municipal courts which did not respond to inquiries.

A total of 369 municipal courts were identified during the survey. Responses to a mailed questionnaire were received from 81 percent of the first and second class cities and 50 percent of the third class cities. Various other sources were used, including mailing lists in the judicial administrator's office and responses to a survey conducted recently by the Kansas League of Municipalities. In reality, the roster of courts changes from day to day as judges resign or die and are not replaced. In addition, some municipalities may have a municipal judge designated but no cases may actually be heard by the person so designated. Because of a lack of standardized reporting requirements for caseloads, specific information as to the operation of municipal courts is difficult to obtain. Where data is available, there is no comparability of terms and comparisons become difficult. What is presented, however, is the best picture available of a very disparate situation. What is definitely required is a standardized system of reporting judicial business at the municipal court level.

Although population and caseloads are generally related, the classification of cities and caseloads do not appear to be so related. Exhibit G indicates the range of caseload and number of cases by class of cities as well as the percentage of total municipal caseload and case increases between 1973 and 1974. Although not shown, almost 80 percent of municipal courts in third class cities have caseloads under 100 cases per year. In contrast, the cities of the third class experienced a caseload increase of 31 percent between 1973 and 1974 in relation to an overall increase of all municipal courts of 10 percent for the same time period. (See Exhibit G.)

IV. MUNICIPAL COURT STAFFING, LOCATIONS, AND REVENUES

Senate Bill No. 284 provides for the abolition of municipal courts and the transfer of their jurisdiction to the district court. No provision is made in the bill for the transfer of municipal judges or support staff. In most instances where municipal courts are part-time operations, the caseloads can easily be absorbed by the district court and processed by the district magistrate or associate district judge and existing support staff. Where current municipal caseloads are high, there are in some instances full-time staff available to handle the caseloads.

It is recommended that court support personnel, where they are currently employed full time, be retained to continue the processing of municipal cases. In some instances, there will have to be transfers of personnel to new court locations as recommended in this report. In other instances, employees should be retained in their current court locations where a branch court operation of the district court is indicated. (See personnel and location detail in Appendix B.)

Full-time municipal court employees have been identified in the following locations:

Topeka
Lawrence
Junction City
Newton
Leawood
Lenexa
Merriam
Olathe
Shawnee
Parsons

Coffeyville
Wichita
Great Bend
Manhattan
Hays
Garden City
Liberal
Hutchinson
Salina
Kansas City

Where municipal court employees are part time and where the clerical demands of the caseload cannot be absorbed easily by the existing district court personnel, then such part-time employees as are necessary to process such cases should be allowed to transfer to the district court location in the county seat location where all such cases are handled.

Suggested Municipal Court Locations, Future Staffing, and State Revenues

An analysis of the locations of municipal courts in relation to their consolidation and transfer of jurisdiction to the district court involves basically three considerations: (1) distance to be traveled by the public and law enforcement officers, (2) availability and adequacy of court facilities, and (3) volume of the existing caseload at a municipal court location.

In recommending consolidation and new court locations, a special care was taken to balance all three factors coupled with the objective of centralizing all judicial operations for a particular county at one location. Upon examination of mileage distances from the county seat or other major court location, it was discovered that the majority of municipal courts were 20 miles or less from either the county seat or other major court location, i.e., city or magistrate court. Overall, only 14 percent of municipal courts were further than 20 miles from these centrally located courts. It was therefore possible to combine most municipal court locations in one common, county seat location. In summary, 369 locations have been combined into 120 locations. (See location details in Appendix B.)

In most instances, the existing judicial manpower can assume this transferred caseload with relative ease. As was indicated earlier, the caseload of the courts of limited jurisdiction varies. In some instances, where such caseloads are high, the imposition of the municipal caseload would thrust an additional burden on an already overworked bench. To alleviate this, it is recommended that additional associate district judgeships be created to assist not only in the caseload of the courts of limited jurisdiction but also to handle the additional municipal caseload transferred to the new district court. These additional judgeships and the estimated bench time required to process the municipal cases are set forth in Exhibit H. For purposes of estimating bench time, a factor of one quarter hour per case was used. Since methods of counting cases vary, caseload may be over- or understated. It is felt, however, that these estimates are reasonably sound.

Support staff who are currently employed full time in existing municipal courts are recommended to be transferred to the new district court system. This transfer recognizes the fact that a substantial clerical work load will accompany any transfer of municipal court jurisdiction to the district court. The computer printout of municipal court personnel should be consulted for greater detail on full-time employees. The total estimated personnel costs for the new judgeships and transfer of court personnel are set forth in Exhibit I and reflect the additional amounts required to alleviate salary inequities of court support staff. At least a 15 percent increase over existing salary levels would be required to achieve comparability with the state pay plan.

The total personnel cost for the absorption of municipal court jurisdiction is $1,344,883. Operating expenses amount to another $160,069. The operating expense figure can be deemed to be underesticated because many municipal court operating expenses are usually hidden and are otherwise merged with other items in the general budget of the City or of a major city department.

Senate Bill 284 provides that 20 percent of municipal court revenues shall be returned to the State except where municipalities furnish court facilities and the percentage is then 10 percent. Court locations suggested to be located away from the county seat are listed in Exhibit J. The total revenues to be returned to the State under each of the above breakdowns are $523,811 under the 20 percent plan and $257,779 under the 10 percent plan. Thus, a total of $781,590 can be expected to be returned to the state general fund as its share of municipal court revenues. This is further detailed on Exhibit K.

Thus, the total cost of municipal court operations is estimated to be approximately $1,700,000. If revenues returned to the State amount to $781,590, the net cost to the State of absorbing municipal court cases into the unified court system is estimated at $900,000 to $1 million.
