Foreword

While the primary mission of the Iowa Statistical Analysis Center (SAC) is the development and analysis of criminal justice data, an ancillary SAC function is creation of a "systems" perspective in viewing the criminal justice system's operation. One of the major drawbacks in developing this perspective is the historically fragmented nature of that system. Not only are various levels of government responsible for different parts of the system, these subsystems, by design, frequently occupy opposing roles. As a result, actors in one portion of the system typically know little about the functioning of those in other parts, and communication between and among them may range from antagonistic to nonexistent.

Publication of this Directory obviously cannot cure these ills; however, it can be viewed as a first step in this process. It can also provide an idea of the magnitude of Iowa's criminal justice system, and assist in developing an improved perception of the system's operation.

For the past two years, the SAC has published the Iowa Criminal Justice Directory to promote a greater exchange of information among the members of the criminal justice community. While both publications attempted to provide a comprehensive listing of key criminal justice personnel, this 1981 version has been expanded even more, to include all law enforcement administrators throughout the state, as well as the newly-created State Appellate Defender's Office. An alphabetical listing of the 1,536 individuals listed in the 1981 Directory has also been included as a cross-reference guide.

The Directory is organized into six sections, with the first three addressing the areas of the criminal justice system, i.e. law enforcement, adjudication, and corrections. The fourth section refers to the juvenile justice system; and the last two sections list educational institutions, followed by criminal justice planning, research, and statistical agencies.

While the sheer volume of criminal justice personnel in Iowa suggests that some groups or agencies may have been omitted, care has been taken to minimize deficiencies. To help assure accuracy of future publications please forward any corrections or additions to:

Introduction

Included in the Law Enforcement Section of this Directory are the names, addresses, telephone numbers, and key personnel of all enforcement agencies having statutory power to arrest, which are administered by State or local governments (county, municipal, township, special district or independent school district). Also presented is a listing of all professional law enforcement associations and organizations identified in the State. As it was decided that only those agencies having sworn peace officers with general arrest power would be included in this publication, those whose power to arrest is limited to a specific type of crime or subject matter have been omitted, e.g. pharmacy investigators, medical examiners and county coroners.

The general statutory power to arrest is shared by all major law enforcement agencies in the State, including the State Patrol, county sheriffs, police chiefs and marshals. Also included are all identifiable and special district police forces, e.g. capitol security and campus police, regardless of the size of the force. As defined by the Code of Iowa, "peace officer" includes, but is not limited to, the following: 1) sheriffs and their deputies, 2) marshals and policemen of cities, 3) peace officer members of the department of public safety, 4) special security officers employed by board of regent's institutions, 5) conservation officers, and 6) employees of the department of transportation as are designated. (Note: Probation and parole agents, and probation officers are also defined by the Code as peace officers and have been referenced in both Section 3, Corrections, and Section 4, Juvenile Justice.) There may be other persons as designated by law with limited powers to act in the capacity of peace officer; for the purposes of this publication, however, they have been omitted.

Broadly defined, the duties of a peace officer are to preserve the peace, ferret out crime, and apprehend and arrest all criminals. (This statement is not intended to specifically define duties of any person who, by law, is designated as a peace officer.) At the state level these duties rest primarily with the Highway Patrol as its officers handle traffic enforcement, accident investigation and, in addition, assist local law enforcement agencies upon request or whenever the need is apparent.

At the county level, responsibility for all law enforcement rests with the sheriff, who is principal peace officer of that jurisdiction. In Iowa there are 99 county sheriffs, each being in an elected position and responsible for maintaining order in the county, overseeing the operation of the county jail, and serving as an officer of the court. (Although under the administration of the sheriff, county jails may be found in Section 4, Corrections, of this volume.)

Although the county sheriff is responsible for all law enforcement within his jurisdiction, much of this responsibility is shared with municipal police forces and marshals. At the municipal level, there are currently 955 incorporated cities in Iowa, and approximately 51% (489) of them currently employ the services of a chief of police, town marshal or law enforcement officer. The size and range of activities of municipal enforcement agencies varies, but generally increases with the population of the city served. The authorized size of the departments ranges from one parttime officer in smaller cities to 350 full-time officers in Des Moines. Less populous municipalities, even though incorporated, generally rely on the sheriff for police services, whereas larger municipalities often have departments which are self-sufficient.

In summary, it can be said that police protection is predominantly a cooperative venture at the local level, with some arrangement existing between state and local agencies. To foster cooperation among local agencies, regional training facilities and programs for officers from county and municipal enforcement agencies have been developed in the State. (See Section 5, entitled Criminal Justice Educational Institutions, for further information about educational and training facilities in law enforcement.)

Adjudication

II. Adjudication Section

Introduction

The judicial system in Iowa is two-tiered, consisting of a court of appellate jurisdiction (the Iowa Supreme Court) and courts of general jurisdiction (the District Courts). This section presents the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of judicial personnel in both tiers, and jurisdictional boundaries for the District Courts.

As a result of major reorganization of Iowa's judicial system, there has been a decrease in the number of courts in the State. Abolished as a result of recent legislation were justices of the peace, mayors', police, superior, and municipal courts. These lower courts have been replaced by a unified trial court, known as the Iowa District Court, which has general jurisdiction in all actions, including juvenile.

In addition to listing District Court judges, this section includes information on senior judges, district associate judges, judicial magistrates (part-time), and clerks of the district and associate district court. Since the District Courts are supervised and administered by the Supreme Court, included is information on the Office of the Supreme Court Administrator as well as administrators' offices in each of the eight judicial districts.

Also presented in this section is a listing of Prosecutorial and Public Defender Offices. Prosecutorial offices are, for the purposes of this publication, those agencies which provide legal counsel or other services to the State, county and municipal governments and have some prosecutorial responsibilities.

Following the State Attorney General's Office, which heads the State Department of Justice, is the listing of county attorneys who have primary responsibility for prosecution at the county level. Each of the 99 county attorneys fills an elected position and serves as legal counsel to the county, prosecutes felonies and misdemeanors, and handles civil matters.

Additionally, many of the 955 incorporated municipalities in Iowa retain a city attorney to prosecute violations of municipal ordinances. Information in this Directory includes only those city attorneys serving cities with a population of 5,000 or more.

While prosecutorial functions rest with attorneys at both the county and municipal level, public defender functions lie primarily at the county level. With the exception of the 10 defender offices, nine of which have single-county jurisdiction and the tenth serving a multi-county area, indigent defense is provided through court-appointed counsel.

The final part of the Adjudication Section gives the names, addresses, telephone numbers, and presidents of the professional legal associations and organizations in the State. A review of this listing will show that while some are composed of the judiciary, the majority of associations and organizations are for other judicial personnel.

III. Corrections Section

Introduction

Iowa's role in corrections is carried out primarily at two levels: by the Department of Social Services at the state level, and by the eight Departments of Correctional Services at the local level. Pre-institutional programs are administered at the local level within each of the eight judicial districts. Although the Department of Social Services assisted in developing most of these programs, and has begun to set standards for their operation, each of these programs operates autonomously.

Listings of the local directors in each of the judicial districts, their supervisory staff, and location of the administrative offices for each of these programs are found in this Directory. Also included is a listing of all field offices operating in each district. While it should be noted that supervisors in most of these districts are responsible for individual programs, i.e., pre-trial release, release-with-services, pre-sentence investigation, probation, and community residential programs, there are a few districts having supervisory staff responsible for specific geographic areas rather than individual programs.

The Department of Social Services plays a much larger role in the operation of institutional programming, and maintains two divisions to administer correctional programs and facilities. The Division of Adult Corrections (Bureau of Correctional Institutions and Bureau of Prison Industries) operates the adult institutions, supportive facilities, and provides rehabilitative services to adult felons. The Division of Community Programs (Bureau of Children's Services) administers the juvenile institutions and works primarily with adjudicated youth, pre-adjudicated youth, and youth paroled from the juvenile institutions. In this section of the Directory are the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of key personnel in both divisions, as well as adult correctional facilities in the State. (For a listing of the juvenile facilities, refer to the Juvenile Justice Section of this publication.)

Post-institutional services are also administered by the Department of Social Services. The Bureau of Community Correctional Services has primary responsibility for post-institutional facilities and services. It operates work release centers across the State to prepare inmates to be discharged or placed on parole.

Determination of parole rests on the members of the Iowa Board of Parole, which currently has five members. As defined by the Iowa Code, the responsibility of the Board is to determine which of the inmates of the State's penal institutions qualify for, and should be placed on, parole. Once on parole, however, the Bureau of Community Correctional Services supervises them. A listing of the Parole Board members, including the Executive Secretary, can be found in this section.

The responsibility for inspection of jail facilities also rests with the Bureau of Community Correctional Services. Located within the Bureau is a Jail Inspection Unit, comprised of a chief inspector and three assistants, who are charged with inspecting facilities for security, safety, sanitation, segregation of prisoners, the condition of facilities, and the care and treatment of prisoners. With the exception of one lockup which is administered by the State, jail operations are the responsibility of county and municipal governments, under the direction of sheriffs and chiefs of police, respectively. Information about the Jail Inspection Unit, and listings of state, county, and municipal jails and lockups, are included. In those instances in which cooperative arrangements between a city and county have been made and have resulted in the establishment of a facility operated jointly by both units of government, such facilities are noted.

IV. Juvenile Justice Section

Introduction

Established within each county in Iowa is a juvenile court which is within the district court. It consists of district judges, district associate judges and/or judicial magistrates who have been appointed by the chief judge of each district. The juvenile court judges, who usually rotate on a yearly basis, then have the option of appointing referees to serve at their pleasure. A referee is primarily responsible for the initial hearing of juvenile cases, as determined by the juvenile court judge, and transmitting the findings to the judge. Listings of juvenile court judges and referees are presented in this section.

Judges of the juvenile court are also responsible for the selection and appointment of probation officers to carry out the work of the court. As mentioned in the Introduction to the Law Enforcement Section, probation officers possess the powers of peace officers and may perform investigations as required by the juvenile court. In addition, they may be charged with the supervision of a child before and after a hearing, and must represent the interests of the child when the case is heard. Included in this section are the names of all chief juvenile probation officers, their office locations, and telephone numbers. In those areas having only a single-person probation office, such information is noted.

As indicated in the Code, all juvenile probation officers are required to complete a basic training program within their first year of employment. Offered at the Des Moines Area Community College, the program lasts from four to seven weeks and is oriented toward the disciplines of law, law enforcement, corrections and child welfare. (See Section V, Criminal Justice Educational Institutions, for further information.)

There are currently two state institutions in Iowa in which juvenile delinquents may be confined: The Iowa Training School at Eldora, which is for male juvenile offenders, and the Iowa Training School at Mitchellville, formerly for females, now confining juveniles of both sexes. There are also private and county institutions in the State to which delinquent children can be committed; however, for the purposes of this publication, only the public shelter and detention facilities have been included.

The responsibility for parole supervision of juveniles rests with the Bureau of Children's Services within the Department of Social Services. Parole from either of the training schools can be granted after serving at the facility for usually at least one year.

A listing of all associations and organizations with interest or involvement in the juvenile justice system can also be found in the Directory. Ten of these have currently been identified.

Education

V. Criminal Justice Educational Institutions Section

Introduction

Provided in this section of the Directory is information on all colleges and universities in the State which offer law enforcement and criminal justice programs. In addition to including the name and location of each institution, also presented are the types of programs offered, respective degrees or areas of specialization, and the name and telephone number of an official knowledgeable about the program.

There are currently 23 educational facilities in Iowa with degrees or areas of specialization in law enforcement and criminal justice. While the majority (14) have associate degree programs, several (9) offer baccalaureate and graduate degree programs as well.

The colleges and universities offering these programs serve people in all areas of criminal justice, dependent on their needs and desires. In the area of law enforcement, police departments have recognized the importance of higher education for officers, and are both recruiting more college graduates and encouraging in-service training. In addition, there are non-degree training programs offered by the Iowa Law Enforcement Academy and three regional facilities, approved to conduct law enforcement training for officers throughout the State.

In the area of courts, there are two universities maintaining schools of law. Of these, one is a private university and the other is state-funded.

There are at present six colleges and universities offering graduate and undergraduate degrees with areas of concentration in corrections. While degree and in-service programs are currently being offered in corrections, only a limited number of non-degree programs exist for institutional personnel.

VI. Criminal Justice Research, Planning and Statistical Agencies Section

(1981)

Introduction

In this final section is found a listing of all criminal justice agencies in Iowa identified as having research, planning and/or statistical units. While many of these agencies are administered by the State, there are still others which function at the regional, county, or municipal level.

There are currently six state departments with units devoted to criminal justice research, planning, and statistical analysis. The size of staff and range of activities vary considerably, depending on the parent agency. For example, the planning unit of the Division of Corrections will address itself to institutional population trends, analysis of the demographic characteristics of inmates, and the like, while the Research and Development Bureau of the Department of Public Safety works with Uniform Crime Reports, development of policy governing the operation of Troopers and Special Agents, and coordination of DPS grant funds.

At the regional level there are seven area crime commissions which function as the regional planning units for the State's Planning Agency; professional staff within each consists of a director and one or two staff, with responsibilities for research, planning; and statistical analysis covering the entire criminal justice system.

At the county and municipal level there is one sheriff's department in the State with a specialized research and planning division, and five police departments with similar capabilities.
