INTRODUCTION

Parole may be defined as a conditional release of a prisoner from a penal institution which permits that prisoner to serve a portion of his sentence "outside" the institution to which he was committed. The granting of parole is most often based on a prisoner's demonstration, and/or the Paroling Authority's perception of his readiness for re-entry into the community, and the belief that the prisoner no longer poses a threat to the community.

Parole does not release a person from further obligations to the State. The parolee remains under the jurisdiction and supervision of the Paroling Authority and must abide by the "terms and conditions" of his parole contract. His parole may be revoked if he fails to live up to the terms of this contract, if he commits a new offense, or it is deemed he has regressed to the point where he again poses a threat to the community.

A parolee may be released from parole supervision and from the balance of his court-imposed maximum sentence if he demonstrates successful community adjustment over a number of years and the Paroling Authority believes he and the community no longer require State controls over him.

COMPOSITION OF THE HAWAII PAROLING AUTHORITY

Pursuant to Act 92, Session Laws of Hawaii 1976, the Hawaii Paroling Authority is comprised of three persons, appointed by the Governor, to serve four year terms. Initial appointments were for 4, 3, and 2 years in order to establish a rotation. A member may be reappointed once to a four year term. The Chairman serves on a full-time basis while the other members serve on a part-time, paid basis. Salary is established by law, with the part-time members receiving an hourly rate based on a percentage of the chairman's salary.

DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

The Hawaii Paroling Authority is a quasi-judicial body which, for administrative purposes only, is attached to the Department of Social Services and Housing. As defined by statute, the major duties and responsibilities of the Authority are:

1. to establish the minimum term of imprisonment that a prisoner should serve before he is considered for parole.
2. to determine whether a prisoner should or should not be granted parole.
3. to ensure that those granted parole receive proper supervision.
4. to revoke parole when violations occur and revocation is in the best interest of society.
5. to determine when parolees no longer need to remain on parole status.
6. to make recommendations to the Governor on petitions for pardon.

Each major action taken by the Authority is preceded by explicit efforts to protect the community and the rights of the prisoner. Formal hearings are held for the setting of minimum terms, determination of parole readiness and consideration of parole revocation. These hearings are mandated by law and the prisoner is entitled to representation by an attorney-at-law and certain due process rights which are set forth by statute. The Authority also considers, without formal hearings, whether minimum terms previously established are still appropriate; whether parolees are deserving of discharge from parole status; whether pardon applications to the Governor are worthy of Authority support; and what course of action to take on any other matter that is brought to its attention.

PAROLE STAFF

The Division of Paroles which consists of classified civil service employees serves as staff to the Paroling Authority. With its main office located on Oahu, the Division maintains field offices on each of the other major islands. There are a total of 19.00 authorized positions, headed by the Executive Secretary to the Authority.

EXPENDITURES

During the year, the per capita cost of supervising one parolee was $830.74 or $2.28 per day. Total expenditures of the Paroling Authority was $363,036.13.
