Hawaii County Police Commission
County of Hawaii
Hilo, Hawaii

Dear Commissioners:

As required by Section 52-66 of the Hawaii Revised Statutes, we submit herewith the annual report of the Hawaii Police Department for 1980-81.

Our service to the people of our island in the past year has been highlighted by the fine cooperation we have received from the public.

We have reached several high points of achievement during the past year. We hope that you, community-minded citizens serving in a volunteer capacity to provide leadership and dedication to our department, are as pleased with the progress of the year as we are.

Sincerely,

Guy A. Paul
Chief of Police

COMMUNITY ASSISTANCE: A KEY TO POLICE SUCCESS

The public and the police department.

Together, they make an unbeatable combination.

And it was public cooperation, in a variety of ways, that helped the Hawaii Police Department achieve several major goals during the 1980-81 fiscal year.

The public responded in many ways to assist the Police Department.

Programs such as Crime Stopper, where citizens can receive rewards anonymously for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of felons, and Operation Crime Stop, through which interested persons can leave anonymous messages regarding criminal activity, have paid off time and time again with information that has helped halt the spread of drugs, aided in the capture of criminals and in general made our island a better place to live.

Two major crime figures felt the impact of Hawaii Police Department efforts during the past fiscal year. One was found guilty of manslaughter after a jury trial and another was indicted and charged with three counts of extortion, three counts of promoting gambling and one of conspiracy. Both men are Oahuans, and both have been identified in court proceedings as leaders of organized crime in Hawaii.

At the end of the fiscal year, one was in custody, awaiting sentencing, and the other was out on bail, awaiting trial.

During the fiscal year, several major murder cases were resolved, either by arrest or by conviction.

A typical example of a combination of inter-departmental cooperation, as well as help from the public, was seen in the Samuel Burgess murder in Kona, a senseless slaying that was solved through cooperation between detectives in Hilo and Kona, patrol officers, and the public, through a key tip received in Operation Crime Stop.

COMMUNITY ASSISTANCE

Inhibiting the growth of Hawaii's marijuana industry was another major accomplishment of the department during the fiscal year, and more than 28 tons of marijuana, with a street value in excess of $11 million, was seized and destroyed, as a result of two Green Harvest operations and regular vice and patrol missions.

To emphasize the growing level of violence involved in marijuana growth, officers involved in harvest efforts reported finding 15 booby traps and six firearms during their searches.

The Traffic Enforcement Unit of the department, a federally-funded unit specializing in enforcement of traffic laws, especially the 55-MPH speed limit and driving while intoxicated, recorded a total of 3,834 moving violation citations and 3,597 other citations during the fiscal year.

The community awareness of the Traffic Enforcement Unit, and the resulting decrease in traffic law violations, helped make the Big Island's highways safer for everyone.

An informed public, and an aware public, is very much part of the story of law enforcement on the Big Island. Without the help of the public, our job would be much more difficult, and our streets would not be as safe.

OPERATION CRIME STOP: THE PHONE KEEPS RINGING

A telephone rings. And gets a mechanical answer.

The answering device tells the caller that an anonymous message can be left on the recorder, for police follow-up. This is Operation Crime Stop.

The messages that come in, more than three a day, are extremely helpful to the Hawaii Police Department.

During fiscal year 1980-81, 1,099 telephone calls were logged by Operation Crime Stop. They included 140 that brought vice-related information, and 78 that had crime related information.

Operation Crime Stop is one way the public can help the Hawaii Police Department without being identified, without being known as a source of information.

The messages range from tips on homicides to complaints about stray dogs.

They include people with minor neighborhood arguments to callers reporting major marijuana locations.

During the past fiscal year, calls were received on Operation Crime Stop to assist in three homicide investigations.

"This is one way the public can help the department, without getting involved," Lt. Arlen Bento of the Criminal Investigation Division said. "It has been beneficial to us. We've received solid information on several murders, and some good drug leads, too."

Operation Crime Stop serves to help the public help the Police Department.

Everyone benefits.

CRIME STOPPERS HAWAII: A REWARDING PROGRAM

Within a few months after it was initiated, Crime Stoppers Hawaii, Inc., a community-funded program to pay cash awards to anonymous informants, struck pay dirt.

The program got under way in the spring of 1981, and one of the first tips received by the operation resulted in the clearance of the long-dormant slaying of Melvin Sims, a Hilo man killed and left by a roadside in early 1979.

As a result of the information received, and a follow-up telephone call on the related Operation Crime Stop telephone line, police detectives were able to wrap up a charge, and a subsequent indictment, naming a Hilo youth.

"We considered the Sims case unsolved," recalls Lt. Arlen Bento of the Criminal Investigation Division. "We had no leads. The information from Crime Stoppers gave us what we needed to go on."

A $750 award was paid to the anonymous tipster.

Crime Stopper units have been formed in both Hilo and Kona, to assist in the raising of funds for reward money and to determine the amount of the awards to be paid.

In Kona, Barbara Keumper is president of the organization, with Harvey Gould as vice president and Jenny Rich as secretary-treasurer. In Hilo, Jarrett Karasaki chairs the organization, with Steve Knox as vice president, Librada Luis as secretary and George Hall, Jr. serving as treasurer.

The program is under way on the islands of Oahu and Maui as well.

Each week a selected crime is pinpointed, and publicized through radio stations and newspapers. The public is invited to call in, to a "hot line" number, to leave anonymous tips and receive a coded informant number. Tips that have information leading to arrest and conviction are then submitted to the board of Crime Stoppers for a determination of the amount of the reward.

Funds for Crime Stoppers were raised from a variety of community sources, including contributions from the islands' Chambers of Commerce, the Hawaii Island Contractors' Association and other businesses and individual sponsors.

This car was one of the many fire targets in the resort parking lots in Kailua.

This large truck was also a firebug victim, in a mauka Kona parking lot.

THE KONA FIREBUG: A COMMUNITY RESPONDS

It was the kind of crime wave that can set an entire community abuzz.

Over the period of two months, at various locations in Kona, 32 cars were set afire as they sat, unoccupied and unattended, in parking lots and on streets.

At the most conservative estimates, more than $57,000 in damage was done.

Most of the car fires were set from 6 p.m. to 5 a.m., and a massive police effort, aided and abetted by much community support, was put together to try to apprehend the criminal.

Sgt. Henry Silva, now a lieutenant, was named to head a task force that had at least five people and sometimes many more, in the continuing effort. Security guards from various hotels were assigned by their employers to assist the police, and many community tips, as well as citizen's $1,000 reward offer, were recorded.

For a month and a half, the effort, consisting mostly of stakeouts in various locales where the firebug was suspected to be operating, were conducted. The officers on the task force worked split shifts, concentrating their efforts on the key times the firebug had been hitting. They used "bait" cars, rented or borrowed and left in conspicuous locations.

Finally, on the night of November 21, 1980, a massive stakeout program was implemented. Nearly every parking lot in Kona was watched by crew of 30 people, including policemen, firemen, and security guards from various hotels.

The effort paid off, and the long dreary task came to an end when Officer Robert Eddington, who was staked out with hotel security officer Robert Crowell at the Kona Hilton parking lot, apprehended a suspect, an employee of another Kona hotel. The policemen and the security officer watched as he approached a car, crumpled newspaper, lit the papers and started the car fire. He was apprehended, indicted on 30 counts of malicious burning, pleaded guilty to 15 counts and was awaiting sentencing.

The sigh of relief within the department echoed throughout the Kona District when one of the most baffling of crime waves recorded on the Big Island has been solved.

MARIJUANA ERADICATION: THE EFFORT CONTINUES

The marijuana problem is becoming one that affects more and more residents of the Island of Hawaii.

It is a serious problem, affecting many innocent people.

Outright warfare between various groups of marijuana growers has been reported, and the recovery of booby traps and firearms is on the increase.

During the 1980-81 fiscal year, officers of the Hawaii County Police Department confiscated more than 28 tons of marijuana on the Big Island. That's more than a half-pound of marijuana for every man, woman and child living on the island.

The street value of marijuana which was confiscated and burned was more than $11 million. Officers in two Green Harvest operations, using National Guard helicopters, confiscated more than 15 tons of marijuana, and the regular missions of the department added up to another 13 tons.

Nine muskrat traps, six boards with nails and six firearms were recovered as a result of the ongoing marijuana eradication efforts.

A total of 18 people were arrested as a result of Green Harvest operations, and 490 were arrested during the fiscal year as a result of other drug violations.

More and more, marijuana cultivation is becoming a problem for the Hawaii resident who wants to enjoy free access to the Big Island's wilderness areas. It is also becoming a problem on the plantations, and in areas where other agricultural efforts are being undertaken.

Our citizens, the residents of the Big Island, have the right to use the various parts of the island for hunting, fishing, hiking, bird watching, and similar activities, without fear of assault, without fear of injury because of booby traps and without fear of harassment.

Our eradication efforts make only a small dent, perhaps 10 to 15 percent, in the marijuana cultivation industry on the Big Island.

We estimate that marijuana is a $100 million business, and we must continue to reduce the influence it is having on the people of our island.

We are having some impact. But the battle is a long, never-ending one.

Our mission is to persevere.

TRAINING NEW OFFICERS: AN ONGOING PROGRAM

The fiscal year 1980-81 saw 27 new recruits graduate from training with the Hawaii Police Department, and, at year's end, a training class for another 15 recruits was about to begin.

The new recruits were part of the 35th recruit class, which graduated 18 new patrolmen on August 8, 1980, and the 36th recruit class, which produced nine new officers on March 27, 1981.

The 37th recruit class, which will have 15 members, was scheduled to begin in the first few weeks of the 1981-82 fiscal year.

The recruits spend some 17 weeks in a variety of types of training, with members of the Hawaii Police Department joined by experts from a variety of other agencies to produce skilled police officers.

Among the agencies assisting in the training of Hawaii police officers are the State Department of Transportation, the County Corporation Counsel and Prosecutor's offices, the Hawaii County Fire Department, the U.S. Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Unit, the U.S. Army, Hilo Hospital, the Drug Enforcement Administration, Secret Service and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The new police officers learn such things as basic water safety, defensive driving, the use of a camera, execution of search warrants, firearms use, fire science and arson investigation, fingerprints, first responder training, vice investigation, traffic control, use of radar, crisis intervention, preservation of evidence as well as a variety of other professional police subjects.

The old concept of handing a new recruit a nightstick, gun and a badge no longer exists. Today's Hawaii County policeman has the advantage of extensive professional training.

SELF-DEFENSE CLINICS: PEOPLE PROTECTION

More than 3,000 people on the Big Island had the opportunity to learn first hand a few methods of prevention of problems, and self defense methods, during a series of programs presented in every district of the island during the past fiscal year.

Sgt. Gerry Meyer of the Community Relations Division of the department coordinated the programs, with assistance from police officers Richard Carvalho of Kohala, Edwin Freitas of Hamakua, Robert Dompkey of Puna, Joseph Kealoha of Waimea, Warren Shaw and Genevive Ahia of Kona, Clarence Mendonca, Charles Chai, Phyllis Liu and Andrea Gamayo, all of Hilo, and Sgt. David Kawauchi of Ka'u.

Although designed primarily for women, some men, especially senior citizens, have attended the programs. A film, "Nobody's Victim," is shown, and demonstrations of preventative measures as well as self defense techniques are presented.

"Women need to be aware of what they can do to prevent things from happening," Sgt. Meyer explains. "We're not telling them they have to fight back. We're just explaining what they can do."

The programs were presented to groups of government employees, hotel workers, union groups, school students, women's organizations and others, and are still available from the community relations section of the Police Department.

George Iranon

DEPARTMENTAL RETIREES: IRANON HEADS LIST

Six veteran members of the Hawaii Police Department retired in the 1980-81 fiscal year with more than 150 years of service to their credit.

Retiring were Inspector George Iranon, who headed County Operations; Captain Charles L. Rose, Jr., who was in charge of the Criminal Investigation Division; Captain Atsushi Sato, commander of the Records and Identification Division; Lt. Wallace T. Hiyoto, of the Records and Identification Division; Police Officer Daniel Keliia of the Kona Airport, and Police Officer Mack Hatayama of the Traffic Services, Hilo.

Retiring during the year on a disability retirement was Police Officer Patrick F. Cootey of the Hamakua District.

Inspector Iranon, who retired on March 1, 1981, had been a member of the department for 25 years. He had served in the Hilo and Kona districts, and had been a captain in Kona before being promoted to inspector. During his 10 years as an inspector, he headed, at various times, County Operations, Hilo Operations and the Administrative Bureau.

Capt. Sato, a member of the department for more than 31 years, had served in Hilo, Kona and Waimea and had commanded the North Hilo District and the Criminal Investigation Division before being named to head the Records and Identification Division. He retired on December 31, 1980.

Capt. Rose, a police officer for more than 25 years, served in Hilo and Hamakua, and commanded the North Hilo and Waimea districts, before being assigned to head the Criminal Investigation Division. He retired on August 1, 1980.

Lt. Hiyoto, who served just over 25 years, served in Hilo and Hamakua before being assigned to the Records and Identification Division. He retired on December 31, 1980.

Officer Keliia, a 31-year veteran, had served in Hilo and Kona and Officer Hatayama, a member of the department for 27 years, had served in Hilo and Puna. Both men retired on December 31, 1980.

Officer Cootey served in Ka'u and Hamakua and had a total of 10 years of service prior to his disability retirement.

LETTERS OF COMMENDATION: PRAISE AND THANKS

Letters of commendation come from a lot of different places.

They come from island residents who appreciate some special sort of service, or who want to just say "a job well done."

They come from tourists, who are amazed by the aloha spirit shown by our island law enforcement officials.

They come from other police departments, thanking us for helping them with cases that cross continents and oceans.

There were letters of commendation in 1980-81 for an officer who volunteered to teach senior citizens how to throw nets, for an officer who helped a woman with a flat tire in a dark hotel parking lot in the middle of the night, for an officer who "negotiated" a peace treaty between two neighbors arguing over a barking dog and for other similar items.

There were letters of appreciation from a tourist, who was aided by an off-duty officer at Hapuna, when the tourist was flipped by a heavy wave and suffered neck injuries.

There was a letter from the special assistant to the Dalai Lama, in appreciation for security assistance during the visit of the religious leader to the Big Island, and there were letters of thanks from the U.S. Secret Service, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and police jurisdictions in California, Maryland and Washington for cooperation extended.

Typical of the letters received were the comments by a Hilo business executive whose safe was stolen, and who said of Officer Robert Torngren, who helped recover the papers scattered from the opened safe:

"We are thankful that we had such a fine officer as Robert Torngren. He has shown us respect and concern, as though it were his own, so it made us all feel at ease."

A tourist, from New York, wrote of Officer Lewellyn Fukui, that, after their rental car stalled in Laupahoehoe, and they knocked on the door of the nearest house seeking assistance, Officer Fukui, who is assigned to Kona but who was visiting his mother on his day off, volunteered to drive the couple to Hilo.

"It was impressive to us that this young man would spend the only evening of his day off helping out strangers who were in trouble. We are grateful for his sacrifice.

"Officer Fukui is obviously a dedicated lawman who views his responsibility for public safety in the broadest possible sense."

Letters of appreciation such as these are sent to the Police Commission for information purposes, then placed in the individual officer's personnel file.

Detective John Kalawe

DETECTIVE JOHN KALawe: COUNTY'S TOP EMPLOYEE

Detective Sergeant John L. Kalawe, Jr., was named the County of Hawaii's non-supervisory employee of the year for 1980.

A member of the department since 1966, he has been a detective in the Criminal Investigation Division in Hilo since 1977.

He was cited for his professional accomplishments in clearing a number of major crimes in Hawaii County, and for developing information that is not often available to other investigators in the department.

Also noted were his community services in Lions, church groups, community association and the PTA, as well as self-development skills and specific citations by various prosecutors for his outstanding work in investigation, pretrial and trial preparation.

In the nomination of Detective Kalawe for the County honors, Acting Capt. Arlen Bento of the Criminal Investigation Division said "Detective Kalawe continues to share his skills and knowledge with his peers and offers assistance without any thought of recognition for his accomplishments. He exhibits the same high degree of character within his community and family."

THE 1980 STATISTICS: NUMBERS FOR EVERYONE

Statistics can sometimes have one meaning for one person, and a different meaning for another.

For example, the fact that the police officers of the Hawaii Police Department travelled 3,028,509 miles on duty last year.

That seems like a lot of miles. Especially when you realize that it is equivalent of 12 and a half trips from Earth to the Moon and back.

That's a lot of miles!

This year's statistical report, based on the numbers for the calendar year 1980, indicates that there was one police officer for each 382 persons on the Big Island, and that there was one police officer for each 16.6 square miles of land.

The total number of Part One, or more serious, criminal offenses showed an increase of 12.5 percent over 1979, while clearances of Part One offenses were up 1.1 percent. Part Two, or lesser offenses, increased 7.9 percent, while clearances of Part Two offenses increased 6.3 percent.

Particularly noteworthy was an 84.6 percent clearance rate in murders, a 95 percent clearance rate in rapes and an 85 percent clearance rate in aggravated assaults.

The impact of an added emphasis on traffic enforcement showed with a continuing decrease in the number of traffic fatalities in 1980, a total of 32, compared with 38 in 1979 and an all-time high of 44 in 1978.

The total cost of police services on the Big Island was $7.2 million, with 73.7 percent of that going for salaries and wages. The cost to the average Big Islander was $78.49 per person.

Law Enforcement Code of Ethics

As a Law Enforcement Officer, my fundamental duty is to serve mankind; to safeguard lives and property; to protect the innocent against deception, the weak against oppression or intimidation, and the peaceful against violence or disorder; and to respect the Constitutional rights of all men to liberty, equality and justice.

I will keep my private life unsullied as an example to all; maintain courageous calm in the face of danger, scorn, or ridicule; develop self-restraint; and be constantly mindful of the welfare of others. Honest in thought and deed in both my personal and official life, I will be exemplary in obeying the laws of the land and the regulations of my department. Whatever I see or hear of a confidential nature or that is confided to me in my official capacity will be kept ever secret unless revelation is necessary in the performance of my duty.

I will never act officiously or permit personal feelings, prejudices, animosities or friendships to influence my decisions. With no compromise for crime and with relentless prosecution of criminals, I will enforce the law courteously and appropriately without fear or favor, malice or ill will, never employing unnecessary force or violence and never accepting gratuities.

I recognize the badge of my office as a symbol of public faith, and I accept it as a public trust to be held so long as I am true to the ethics of the police service. I will constantly strive to achieve these objectives and ideals, dedicating myself before God to my chosen profession . . . law enforcement.
