INTRODUCTION

Maintaining statistical information about Arizona's criminal justice system is not an easy task. It is one that at present is done primarily within each agency with some statewide aggregation completed for selected functional areas such as probation. Movement toward a more comprehensive system of statewide statistics can be facilitated through compilation and distribution of criminal justice data sources.

This publication is a listing of data contact persons within the State's various criminal justice agencies, selected federal agencies, and related agencies such as the Board of Pardons and Paroles. As such, this initial project will undoubtedly have need of revisions, additions and deletions. Comments or suggestions can be directed to the Statistical Analysis Center, Arizona Department of Public Safety, 262-8094.

PRIMARY FUNCTION:

DPS is the statewide law enforcement agency with responsibility for the highway patrol, narcotics investigations, liquor law enforcement, criminal investigations, scientific criminal analysis, and officer training services to local governmental agencies.

DPS also manages an integrated information network, including manual and automated components for all criminal justice agencies within the state. In support of the Arizona Criminal Justice Information System (ACJIS) Network, DPS provides statewide training for terminal operators and UCR reports.

The DPS Uniform Crime Reporting Section (UCR) collects Arizona criminal activity information which is forwarded to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Local police departments, county sheriff's offices, and Department of Public Safety provide monthly summary reports of Arizona criminal activity to UCR. Entered on the DPS computer, these uniform reports form the basis of all UCR data.

The reports provide information to UCR on crimes, arrests and other clearances* (*Aside from arrest, a crime may be cleared for suicide of offender, double murder, deathbed confession, offender killed by police or citizen, confession by offender already in custody, offender prosecuted in another city or state, extradition denied, victim refuses to press charges, offender is prosecuted for a less serious charge or the handling of a juvenile offender.) the disposition of arrested juveniles, assaults on police officers, and on the number and type of law enforcement personnel.

Reported crimes are divided into two parts. There are eight Part I, or Index crimes - criminal homicide, forcible rape, robbery, assault, burglary, larceny-theft, motor vehicle theft, and arson. Part II crimes are generally less serious or less frequently committed offenses -- forgery, gambling, disorderly conduct, etc. - and are recorded only when an arrest is made.

ARIZONA DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS

PLANNING, RESEARCH AND PROGRAM SUPPORT ADMINISTRATION

PRIMARY FUNCTION:

The Department of Corrections (DOC) is responsible for confining and rehabilitating criminal offenders committed to the agency. This includes most adult felony offenders - short term felony offenders are held in county facilities - and juvenile offenders committed to the agency by juvenile courts.

The Division of Research, Program Planning, and Evaluation is responsible for gathering and distributing timely and accurate offender related information as a service to DOC management and other divisions of the Department.

The DOC offender information system has both computerized and manual file components, electronic files on all adults under commitment to the Department -- including individuals on parole -- are maintained in the Offender Based State Correctional Information System (OBSCIS). Stored on the Department of Public Safety (DPS) Computer, OBSCIS is the DOC component of the integrated Criminal Justice Information System (CJIS). Juvenile offender information is stored separately on the Department of Administration Honeywell computer. Most information on individual offenders is confidential, access being allowed only to law enforcement agencies and certain other organizations which work with offenders. Both OBSCIS and the juvenile system are updated twice a month. Information is available on a statewide basis, by institution, by county of residence, by community of residence, and, for juveniles, by neighborhood.

OTHER INFORMATION:

Service Request Reports from Research, Planning and Evaluation Support Administration cover a variety of offender related topics and are produced for DOC management and other agencies working with offenders.

Periodic population accounting reports (monthly, weekly, and daily) provide accounting for the physical location and status of all offenders, both adult and juvenile. The information provided aides in the management of the various DOC institutions and programs and is used for scheduling purposes by the Arizona State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

A monthly summary of disciplinary actions taken is prepared by the Division. The Financial Services Division of the Department can provide detailed financial management information on the Department and its component institutions.

DATA ELEMENTS/INFORMATION SYSTEMS:

Arizona Correctional Statistics is in published form. Copies are free. Detailed data: age, sex, past offenses, education, etc., is provided on offenders admitted during the report year, on the entire adult resident population, on juveniles under DOC jurisdiction, on releases and parole populations. Data is collected annually.

Description: This annual report provides aggregate information on both juvenile and adult offenders for the year preceding the report which is published in January and updated in June of each year. Most information is provided in statewide summary form, although there are some county comparisons.

DEPARTMENT OF ECONOMIC SECURITY

PRIMARY FUNCTION:

DES was created in 1972 to unify state efforts in providing opportunities, services and programs which enable Arizonans with economic and social difficulties to maintain, or move toward, independence.

Services available through the various DES divisions include: unemployment compensation; employment training and job service; rehabilitation programs for handicapped citizens; training and other services for developmentally disabled persons; programs for children and for the aging; family assistance and social services.

The consolidation of a number of formerly independent agencies which occurred in the formation of DES, as well as the great variety of separately funded programs in the department, resulted in the development of several DES data systems in the first years of the department's existence. DES research operations have recently been reorganized along program administrations, replacing the former partially centralized system. These separate program data operations are to be integrated into a department-wide management information system allowing a coordinated exchange of information between the various administrations.

Most DES programs involve federal funding and considerable data are required by the sponsoring federal agencies. DES data operations are highly automated with U.S. Department of Labor (DOL) related program data (i.e. that of the Employment and Training Administration and the Unemployment Insurance Administration) stored on the DES IBM 370 and three Wang minicomputers. The program data for U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) related programs (i.e. that of the Assistance Programs, Social Services, Rehabilitation Services and Division of Developmental Disabilities) are maintained on the state Honeywell computer. The Aging and Adult Administration has no automated data operations.

Many of the data sources listed are the published output of computer programs which, in turn, are based on field reports of the daily operations of the department. The contacts listed for each administration or program can supply information on additional unpublished data that may be available.

Subagencies Covered: Division of Aging, Family and Children Services; Division of Developmental Disabilities, Division of Employment and Rehabilitation Services; and Office of Data Administration.

The Federal System *

The Federal criminal justice system is divided into 94 judicial districts. Each has a Federal District Court and a U.S. Attorney. According to the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, approximately 50,000 criminal cases a year enter this system. Basic similarities exist between the way these cases are processed and the way cases are usually handled at the State and local levels, but there are also some fundamental differences. At the Federal level, as at the State and local levels, criminal justice responsibilities are divided into the components of law enforcement, prosecution, adjudication and sentencing, and corrections.

The Federal system is perhaps most readily distinguishable from State and local systems in terms of the kinds of crimes unique to Federal jurisdictions, including major crimes (e.g., major drug offenses and crimes of serious fraud and corruption), crimes that cross State boundaries (e.g., interstate transport of stolen property, cargo theft), crimes involving Federal money (e.g., counterfeiting, forgery of U.S. checks), and crimes committed on U.S. Government property.

Criminal offenses that are investigated and prosecuted at the Federal level typically do not involve crimes of violence. These are commonly handled at State or local levels. Federal criminal cases usually result from long-term investigations of such crimes as embezzlement, fraud, drug dealing, or forgery. These cases may involve offenders who have committed many offenses over several months or years or have stolen large sums of money.

Five investigative agencies conduct a substantial majority of the investigative work done at the Federal level: the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Secret Service, and Postal Inspection Service, and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. Other Federal agencies, including the Customs Service, the Internal Revenue Service, the Food and Drug Administration, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Securities and Exchange Commission, and individual executive departments also employ investigators to monitor infractions that are the responsibility of those agencies. Investigative activities include crime detecting, evidence collecting, making arrests, presenting cases to Federal prosecutors, and conducting followup investigations.

Prosecuting Federal cases is the responsibility of the Department of Justice litigating divisions and the Office of the U.S. Attorney in each district. U.S. Attorneys are appointed by the President but generally have long-standing familiarity with the concerns of their districts. They are supported in Washington, D.C., by the Executive Office for the U.S. Attorneys.

Many, if not most, Federal crimes are "dual jurisdiction" offenses that may be prosecuted either federally or locally. The decision by a U.S. Attorney to prosecute a bank robbery, for example, may rest on such factors as the seriousness of the offense, the prior record of the offender, policies of the agencies involved, and the degree of involvement of local law enforcement officials in investigating the offense. Generally, the Federal government will prosecute cases brought by Federal agents when the cases meet the U.S. Attorney's standards of seriousness and have enough evidence to merit prosecution.

In addition to the 94 U.S. Attorneys and the 94 Federal district courts, there are 12 circuit or appeals courts and the Supreme Court of the United States. Statistical information about case processing in the judicial branch of the Federal system is maintained by the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts.

After receiving sentences, convicted offenders in the Federal system may be turned over to the Division of Probation in the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts or to the Bureau of Prisons. Offenders sentenced to incarceration are confined in one of the 42 Federal correctional facilities located throughout the country.

Eligibility for parole is determined using guidelines developed by the Federal Parole Commission. These guidelines permit evaluating each Federal inmate on the basis of offense seriousness and relevant aspects of the inmate's criminal history.

FEDERAL DATA SOURCES

The agencies that make up the Federal criminal justice system maintain a variety of data that document the processing of cases and defendants within each agency and describe the criminal record of individual offenders. At the investigation stage there are several automated data bases, including the FBI's Computerized Criminal History File (CCH); the Criminal Automated Reporting System of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms; and the automated files maintained by the Drug Enforcement Administration and the Secret Service. Also, manual files are maintained by other agencies that engage in investigative work.

Information about the cases processed by the U.S. Attorneys is maintained by the Executive Office for the U.S. Attorneys in its Docket and Reporting System. The system provides data about criminal (and civil) case rejections, filings, and dispositions.

Court data maintained by the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts in the Automated Docket System provide information about criminal case filings and terminations in the Federal Courts. The "termination" file contains offense, disposition, and sentencing information.

Finally, the Federal Bureau of Prisons uses automated prison records to monitor the confinement and release of Federal offenders.

In addition to the data bases listed above, special-purpose data sets provide a variety of information about Federal defendants, cases, and practitioners. These include:

- * the U.S. Parole Commission longitudinal recidivism files;
- * pretrial release data maintained by the Federal Pretrial Services Agency;
- * COURTRAN files designed by the Federal Judicial Center that provide automated court records for 11 Federal districts;
- * Prosecutor's Management Information System (PROMIS), currently in two U.S. Attorney's offices, with plans to extend it to other offices;
- * other data developed as part of specific studies sponsored by Federal agencies (e.g., coded presentence investigation reports).
