STUDY DESCRIPTION

The National Jail Census data were collected by the U.S. Bureau of the Census for the Law Enforcement Administration.

The Survey includes all locally administered county and municipal jails with authority to hold prisoners more than 48 hours. Data are presented for 4,037 jails.

The major variables included in the study are: jail population by client's legal status (reasons being held), age and sex; type of prisoners received in the facility by age and sex; maximum sentence that can be served in the facility; employment data, and operating expenditures. The data is presented on a jail-by-jail basis. The data were collected by means of two different mailed questionnaires: one form for sheriffs and police chiefs in municipalities of more than 25,000 population, and another for police chiefs in locales of less than 25,000.

STUDY AND SAMPLING DESIGN

Method of Collection

In the spring of 1970, the U.S. Bureau of the Census canvassed each county in the United States and each municipality which had a 1960 population of 1,000 or more persons to ascertain the presence of a jail. The canvassing included only those jails which were operated locally by the jurisdiction involved, that is, a county, city, or township. State-operated facilities, such as those in Connecticut, Delaware, and Rhode Island, were not included.

Jails surveyed were those which confine inmates for 48 hours or more. Drunk tanks, lockups and similar facilities which normally retain persons for less than 2 full days were excluded.

An individual facility, such as a jail farm or annex, which is administratively dependent upon a parent institution was counted as a separate jail if it is located in a separate geographical area and holds inmates for 48 hours or more. Hospitals for the criminally insane and institutions designed for the exclusive use of juveniles were excluded from the jail census.

The jail census was conducted by mail using two different questionnaires. Police chiefs in municipalities of less than 25,000 population were sent questionnaires containing items relating to the characteristics of (1) the inmate population including type of retention, sex of inmate, and whether adult or juvenile; and (2) characteristics of the facility including designed capacity, retention authority, age of the institution, and employment and expenditure data. County sheriffs and police chiefs in cities of 25,000 population or greater were sent questionnaires containing all the above items and in addition, questions on the age of the cells and the presence of various kinds of facilities.

Survey questionnaires were mailed in April 1970 with followup requests to nonrespondents mailed in May. Where necessary, a telephone call-back procedure was employed to obtain missing data. For the major data items (jail capacity; inmate population by age and status; number of jail employees; and operating expenditures) the response rate achieved through these techniques was 100 percent.

Sixty-six of the jails canvassed in 1970 are not included in this dataset, either because they no longer hold offenders for 48 hours or more; have since been closed; or no longer function as jails. On the other hand, 39 jails which have opened since the 1970 census are not included in this dataset since no data are available for these facilities.

PROCESSING INFORMATION

Each jail is identified by seven variables: state, level of government, county, city or municipality, two types of agency codes and a unique identification number.

Response for the major data items (jail capacity; inmate population by age and status; number of jail employees; and operating expenditures) was 100 percent. Missing data for other items were imputed using standard techniques. Respondents supplied data from their official records where available or provided estimates. No information regarding the computation or source of any data item is available.

APPENDIX I: Definition of Terms

Following is a glossary of terms used in collecting the National Jail Census, 1970 data.

Facility Design

Jail is any individual facility operated by a unit of local government (that is, a municipality or township with a 1960 population of 1,000 or more persons, or a county) for the detention or correction of adults suspected or convicted of a crime. Hospitals for the criminally insane are not included. Detention authority is defined as a minimum of 48 hours' duration.

The lower limit of 1,000 population for cities and townships was set because very few places smaller than this have jails which hold persons 48 hours or more. In the course of the census, no townships of any size were identified which had jails meeting the 48-hour criterion.

Design capacity represents the number of persons the facility was designed to hold, not including arrangements for overcrowding.

Facilities present includes the availability of recreational and educational facilities and/or programs of any kind; the availability of medical facilities of any type; the availability of a visiting room, including an attorney's consultation room; and the availability of operating flush toilets.

Facility Population Characteristics

Inmate population is the number of persons confined in local jails on March 15, 1970.

The legal definitions and age limits for juveniles vary by state. Not only does the maximum age at which a person may have his case heard in a juvenile court vary by state, but within states it may vary by sex or by offense. The responding official completing the questionnaire in each jurisdiction was asked to apply the definitions appropriate to his state in supplying data on the number of juvenile inmates.

In some states there exists a third category falling between juveniles and adults--that of the "youthful offender" or "minor." Generally, this class is considered adult insofar as criminal prosecution is concerned. It should be noted in this regard that in New York, minors (offenders 16-21 years old) are housed separately by law but sometimes within institutions housing those over 21. In the jail census, some institutions in New York reported minors as juveniles and some reported them as adults. Thus, the number of "juveniles" appears very large in two New York City jails which actually hold large numbers of minors.

Persons not yet arraigned includes persons in jail who have not yet been formally charged before a court.

Convicted prisoners awaiting further legal action includes prisoners awaiting sentencing or under appeal.

Expenditure and Employment

Construction expenditures comprise capital outlay for structural additions, replacement facilities, and major alterations, including design, site improvement, and provision of facilities that are an integral part of a structure.

Operating costs includes salaries, wages, purchase of supplies, utilities, and transportation, but does not include capital expenditures, such as construction and the purchase of land and equipment.

Number of full-time equivalent employees is the total number of employees adjusted by applying average full-time earning rates.
