This fortieth issue of this report documents twenty years of juvenile death sentencing under modern death penalty statutes in the United States. About nine years ago I began to generate these reports in order to monitor this phenomenon. With the gracious assistance of so many people, more and more errors are edited out with each edition so that the data reported in each issue is intended to replace any inconsistent data reported in an earlier issue.

Both the annual juvenile death sentencing rate and the juvenile death row population remain very small in comparison to that for adults, each being between 1% and 2% of the totals. For purposes of consistency, a juvenile crime is defined as one committed while the offender was under age 18, the most common age jurisdictional dividing line between juvenile and criminal courts. A juvenile death penalty is one imposed for a juvenile crime.

HISTORICAL BACKGROUND:

Actual execution of such condemned juveniles began in 1642 (Thomas Graunger, Plymouth Colony, Massachusetts). In the 350-year-period since that time, approximately 363 persons have been executed for juvenile crimes. While these 363 juvenile executions were imposed by 38 states and the federal government, they constitute only 2% of the total of 18,500 confirmed American executions since 1608.

Five of these executions for juvenile crimes have been imposed during the current era (1973-1992). These five recent juvenile executions are only 2.6% of the total of 189 executions through the end of 1992, a somewhat higher rate than had been experienced prior to 1973. The five executions are listed in Table 1.

CONSTITUTIONAL BACKGROUND:

The constitutionality of the juvenile death penalty seems to be a reasonably well-settled issue. In Thompson v. Oklahoma (1988), the Supreme Court held that executions of offenders age fifteen and younger at the time of their crimes are unconstitutional. The combined effect of the opinions by Justice Stevens and Justice O'Connor in Thompson is to hold that no state without a minimum age line in their death penalty statute can go below age sixteen without violating Thompson, and in fact no state with a minimum age line in its death penalty statute uses an age less than sixteen. In Stanford v. Kentucky (1989), the Supreme Court held that the Eighth Amendment does not prohibit the death penalty for crimes committed at age sixteen or seventeen regardless of state statutory provisions.

Some rumblings of a challenge to Thompson are being heard. A trial court in Alabama sentenced Clayton Joel Flowers to death on 2-23-90 for a crime committed at age 15. After his death sentence was vacated by the Alabama Court of Criminal Appeals on 7-26-91, the Alabama Attorney General's Office filed a petition for certiorari on 2-26-92 with the United States Supreme Court, seeking either a narrowing or an overruling of Thompson. The Supreme Court denied this certiorari request on 5-18-92. In a similar vein, a Florida trial court sentenced Jerome Allen to death on 10-25-91 for a crime committed at age 15. His case is still pending on appeal before the Florida Supreme Court.

JUVENILE DEATH SENTENCES IMPOSED, 1973 - 1992:

The current American death penalty era began when new death penalty statutes were passed following the Supreme Court's decision in Furman v. Georgia (1972), which in effect struck down all then existing death penalty statutes. Sentencing began under the new statutes in 1973 and continues through today. Although the constitutionality of these current era statutes was not recognized formally by the Supreme Court until 1976 (Gregg v. Georgia) and actual executions did not begin until 1977, the current era of death sentencing began in 1973.

Table 2 on page 4 lists the sentences imposed each year according to the Bureau of Justice Statistics and to my research. A total of 114 juvenile death sentences have been imposed since 1973, only 2.4% of the total of the approximately 4,741 death sentences imposed for offenders of all ages. Two-thirds of these juvenile death sentences have been imposed on 17-year-old offenders, the other third on offenders ages 16 and 15, and none on offenders age 14 or younger at the time of their crimes.

The rate of juvenile death sentencing fluctuated considerably in the early years of this current era but then settled into a consistent annual rate of about 2% of total death sentences in the mid-1980s. A change occurred from 1987 to 1989 when the juvenile death sentencing rate dropped considerably, presumably deterred by the cases then pending before the United States

Supreme Court. The rate appears to have returned to the previous pattern now that those cases have been decided, an annual rate of under 2% of all death sentences but may be dropping slightly.

Of these 114 juvenile death sentences imposed in the current era, only 34 (30%) remain currently in force (see Table 3 on page 5). Five (4%) have resulted in execution, and 75 (66%) have been reversed. Thus, for the 80 juvenile death sentences finally resolved (excluding the 34 death row inmates remaining under juvenile death sentences but still litigating them), the reversal rate is 94% (75/80).

 Estimates

Appendix A to this report (pp. 6-9) provides a more detailed listing of name, age, race, gender, state, and current status for each juvenile death sentence. While the sources of these data are many, the major sources are the outstanding data gathering effort of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc. (particularly Death Row, U.S.A.) and the equally fine monitoring effort of the National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty.

CURRENT DEATH ROW INMATES UNDER JUVENILE DEATH SENTENCES

As of December 31, 1992, 34 persons were on death row under death sentences received for juvenile crimes. These 34 condemned juveniles constituted only about 1.3% of the total death row population of about 2,676. Although all were age 17 or younger at the time of their crimes, their current ages range from 17 to 34. They were under death sentences in 13 different states and had been on death row from 2 weeks to 15 years.

All 34 juvenile offenders on death row were male and had been convicted and sentenced to death for murder. The demographic characteristics of these 34 juveniles and their 44 victims are outlined in Table 3.

50 & over =	W = 31 (70%)	44 (100%)
	44 (100%)

Three-quarters of these cases involved 17-year-old offenders, and a slight majority of them were minority offenders. In contrast, 89% of the victims were adults. Over two-thirds of the victims were white and half were females. Appendix B to this report (pp. 10-12) sets forth the names of these juvenile offenders currently on death row and some brief details about their crimes and sentences. Multiple sentencing dates mean that the earlier death sentence was reversed but then a new death sentence was imposed.
