PREFACE

This compilation of state firearms possession codes that affect juveniles has been prepared by the National Criminal Justice Association for the U. S. Department of Justice, Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA) and Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention under BJA Grant No. 95-MU-MU-0001.

The compilation is an interim report of a 12-month project to carry out a comprehensive review of state firearm codes, which will include a comparative analysis of states' juvenile firearms codes. It was developed from a survey of state firearms code provisions that might be applied to juveniles relating to the ownership, purchase, receipt, handling, carrying, and holding of firearms. The compilation also includes examples of state code provisions concerning the waiver of juveniles into criminal court on charges of firearms possession; however, an exhaustive search for firearms-related waiver provisions was outside the scope of this interim report.

This compilation provides the reader with citations for and general insight into the types of provisions each state has enacted concerning juveniles' possession of firearms. In addition, a national perspective on the nature and range of state juvenile firearms possession code provisions is presented in the introduction to this document. Finally, the introduction includes an overview of juvenile firearms-related provisions enacted by state legislatures in their 1994 sessions and a brief discussion of the outlook for further action in this area in state legislative sessions that will begin in January 1995.

The issue of juveniles and firearms currently is the subject of considerable attention and debate in the Congress, in state legislatures, and among public policymakers and criminal justice officials at all levels of government. It is an issue that undoubtedly will continue to command attention for the foreseeable future.

Knowledge of the context and efficacy of existing state laws is essential if improvements and enhancements of these legal tools are to be developed. It is hoped that ongoing work in this area will contribute to the state of the art of knowledge in this area.

INTRODUCTION

Laws provide the framework for all actions taken by governments to protect the people they serve. Laws reflect the traditions, attitudes, tolerances, and biases of the people who make them and reflect society's changing expectations of how government should perform on its behalf. Consequently, any move to enact legislation to amend existing laws should be preceded by a careful review of what those laws require and whether they have been effective in carrying out the will of society.

This report on state firearm codes has been developed to provide a starting point for a more thorough examination of state laws that prohibit or restrict juveniles' possession of firearms. In particular, this work has been undertaken to provide some preliminary direction and guidance to the federal and state governments in their review of the adequacy of existing statutory prohibitions and restrictions.

The compilation presented in this report provides the reader with citations for and general insight into the types of provisions each state has enacted. In addition, this report presents a national perspective on the nature and range of state juvenile firearm possession code provisions. Finally, it provides an overview of juvenile firearm-related provisions enacted by state legislatures in their 1994 sessions and a brief discussion of the outlook for further action in state legislative sessions to begin in January 1995.

Methodology

The report was produced over a three-week period. The compilation presented in the report covers relevant state firearm code provisions of all 50 states and the District of Columbia.¹

Development of the compilation involved project staff's examination of several hundred pages of state code provisions to identify all provisions relating to juveniles' ownership, purchase, receipt, handling, carrying, and holding of firearms. The project also involved production of clear and accurate representations of code provisions selected for the compilation; development of a system of general descriptive categories for use in classifying selected provisions; and preparation of the report itself, including the development of the overview of state firearm code provisions that may affect juveniles and the summary of 1994 state legislative actions concerning juveniles and firearms possession.

Project staff reviewed two existing compilations and analyses of state firearm codes: Firearms State Laws and Published Ordinances: 1994-20th Edition, produced by the U. S. Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms; and Kids Carrying Guns: Loopholes in State and Federal Firearms Laws, a 1993 publication of the Center to Prevention Handgun Violence. Both documents provided useful cues that helped project staff identify relevant state code provisions.

The ATF report presents statutory language for selected state code provisions as amended through 1993 but contains no analysis, classification, or categorization of state firearms codes. Instead it provided cites to state code provisions and a substantive means of validating the completeness of project staff's search for relevant provisions. The center's report also provided project staff with a resource to check the thoroughness of statutory research. Like the ATF report, the center's report provided citations to relevant state statutes. Unlike the ATF's report, the center's report focused on provisions related to juveniles.

In carrying out its statutory research, project staff employed two automated legislative data bases that permit searches by code citation and key words. Project staff assumed that not all relevant provisions would appear in general firearms and juvenile codes -- an assumption that proved to be true -- and therefore, staff conducted as broad a search of state code provisions as time and imagination would permit. In general, project staff searched for all provisions relating to the ownership, possession, receipt, carrying, holding, and handling of pistols, revolvers, and other firearms.

Uses and Limitations

This report presents as complete, accurate, and current a compilation of state firearm codes that affect juveniles as exists. Nevertheless, this product has three major limitations:

- The compilation contains most but not all state firearm code provisions that might be applied to juveniles relating to the ownership, purchase, receipt, handling, carrying, and holding of firearms;
- The national overview included in this report presents a useful but likely oversimplified view of the status of state controls on juveniles' possession of firearms. The overview of state firearm codes broadly classifies very diverse state code provisions in an effort to provide legislators, public officials, criminal justice practitioners, and other interested parties with some general insight into the nature, range, and prevalence of certain types of firearm-related laws;
- The scope of project staff's work did not encompass a review of local firearm ordinances or state constitutional provisions or laws that prescribe the authority of state and local governments to impose prohibitions and restrictions on citizens' actions and that therefore might extend to firearms possession.

In general, the compilation includes most, but not all, state code provisions relating to juveniles' possession of firearms. The compilation probably includes most code provisions that specifically place restrictions or prohibitions on juveniles' possession of a firearm, including provisions that establish specific prohibitions for particular categories of juveniles, such as juveniles committed to mental institutions or juveniles addicted to drugs or alcohol. Likewise, the compilation includes most general provisions affecting any individual's possession of a handgun, including a juvenile's possession of a handgun. The compilation also includes most, but not all, state code provisions that prohibit or restrict possession of firearms in schools and on school grounds; in other educational facilities; in public facilities; and in enumerated private facilities, such as day care centers.

Some relevant code provisions that do not use key words such as firearm, handgun, or weapon but incorporate a reference to another state firearm code provision may have been excluded from the compilation. For example, a code provision might state that all persons who violate a code provision relating to possession that is cited only by section are subject to a particular penalty.

The compilation does not include prohibitions or restrictions on or penalties for adults' sale of firearms to minors or provisions relating to an adult's liability for a juvenile's misuse of a firearm.

Project staff suspect that state constitutions or general provisions of state laws may impose limitations on state legislatures in their enactment of statutes that regulate the possession of firearms or delegate certain authority to regulate firearms to local jurisdictions. However, a review of state constitutions and a search for provisions relating generally to governmental powers was not within the scope of project staff's research in developing this compilation. Likewise, the compilation does not include local ordinances, which in some jurisdictions may place greater restrictions on firearms possession than are established under state statute.

Preparation of the national overview contained in this report involved the development of several broad general descriptive categories of provisions. Classification in this manner makes it possible to generalize about state codes that may be similar in overall focus but differ significantly in content. However, it also creates the risk that the information may mislead the reader. Hoping to avoid the possibility of misrepresentation, project staff directed their efforts to developing categories that would get at the general focus of the code provision. Project staff's objective was to describe accurately, but in general terms, the types of provisions to be highlighted. In carrying out its classification of code provisions, project staff chose to err on the side of caution; thus a particular category may underrepresent the prevalence of the code provision among the states.

A National Perspective

Statutory research carried out by project staff located numerous state firearm code provisions that affect juveniles' possession of firearms. This research also found a significant breadth in the types of issues covered under state firearm codes and a great variety of approaches in dealing with the same or similar issues.

All 50 states and the District of Columbia have prohibitions or restrictions on firearms generally or handguns in particular that specifically affect or extend to juveniles.

General Firearm/Handgun Possession Prohibitions and Restrictions

Project staff found 26 states that have specific prohibitions or restrictions on juveniles' possession of a firearm and 12 states that have general prohibitions or restrictions on possession of a firearm that would extend to juveniles.

At least 24 states have specific prohibitions or restrictions on juveniles' possession of a handgun and two states have general prohibitions or restrictions on possession of a handgun that would extend to juveniles, according to project research.

Prohibitions on Possession of Special Types of Weaponry and Weapons-related Devices

Project staff's research identified 46 states that have general prohibitions or restrictions on possession of one or more of the following: machine gun, sawed-off shotgun or rifle, assault weapon, silencer, or other "dangerous weapon."

Juveniles' possession of a B.B. gun and/or an air or gas operated or electric-powered weapon is prohibited or restricted in at least four states, project research found.

Parental Consent/Adult Supervision

In at least half of the states, juveniles' possession of firearms is prohibited or restricted unless a parent or other adult or a parent or other adult licensed to possess a firearm is present or the juvenile has a parent's written consent to possess a firearm, project research indicated.

Specific Prohibitions and Restrictions on Juveniles' Possession of Firearms

Less than 10 percent of the states prohibit possession of a firearm by a juvenile convicted as an adult, according to project research.

In more than 20 percent of the states, juveniles who have been adjudicated delinquent are prohibited from owning a firearm.

Firearms Safety Training

Project staff found three states that have a general requirement that hunter or other firearms safety training be completed in order to possess a firearm.

At least five states have enacted specific requirements that juveniles complete a hunter safety or other firearms use training curriculum to possess a firearm.

Project staff found 14 states that provide exceptions to prohibitions and restrictions on possession of firearms for participation in hunter or other firearm safety courses, shooting competitions, or other sanctioned programs.

Special Prohibitions or Restrictions on Firearms Possession

More than one third of the states prohibit possession of a firearms by persons addicted to drugs or alcohol, project research indicates.

Persons committed to mental institutions are prohibited from possessing firearms in at least 18 states.

Penalties for Illegal Possession of Firearms

Project staff found 20 states that have enacted general provisions that make illegal possession of a firearm a felony. At least four states have enacted general provisions that make illegal possession of a handgun by a juvenile a felony.

Project staff found three states have general provisions that extend to juveniles that make illegal possession of a firearm a misdemeanor, and six states have specific provisions that make a first offense of illegal possession of a firearm by a juvenile a misdemeanor.

At least five states have specific provisions that make a first offense of illegal possession of a handgun by a juvenile a misdemeanor.

Firearms and Schools

More than two-thirds of the states have enacted general prohibitions or restrictions that apply to juveniles on possession of a firearm in or near a school and/or other educational or public facility and/or enumerated private facilities, such as a day care center.

Laws in at least eight states provide specific prohibitions or restrictions on juveniles' possession of a firearm in or near a school and/or other educational or public facility and/or enumerated private facilities, such as a day care center.

Waiver of Juveniles to Criminal Court

Laws in at least nine states allow juveniles to be tried in criminal court for committing a crime with a firearm.

Detention of Juveniles for Firearms Possession Violations

Project staff found one state that permits the detention of juveniles for illegal possession of a firearm.

Overview of 1994 Legislative Action

In legislative sessions that adjourned this past spring, states across the nation enacted a variety of gun-related measures, especially laws that limit the possession of firearms by juveniles, according to an NCJA review of state legislation and outside research.

NCJA data base research indicates that states recently have taken a variety of legislative steps to regulate, limit, or prohibit juveniles' contact with guns:

- In Kansas, juveniles face up to a one-year penalty and a $2,500 fine for criminal possession of a firearm under a bill signed into law in April. Similar laws were passed this year in Kentucky, South Dakota, and Tennessee, and Louisiana has passed a measure forbidding juveniles to sell firearms.
- In Arizona, selling firearms to minors has been upgraded from misdemeanor to felony status.
- North Carolina enacted a law making the transfer of weapons to a minor a felony.
- California enacted a measure outlawing the sale of concealable weapons to minors. The offense has been included among a series of misdemeanors that are punishable by a 10-year prohibition against firearms ownership and possession.
- In Delaware, an adult may now transfer a firearm to a minor only with the permission of the minor's parent; unlawfully allowing access to a firearm is a misdemeanor.
- Virginia Gov. George Allen (R) signed a law making it a criminal offense to allow a child younger than 12 years old to have possession or use of any firearm, loaded or unloaded, when the child is not under parental supervision.

- Utah Gov. Michael O. Leavitt (R) signed a law in March that made firearm safety education part of the mandatory curriculum in public schools.
- According to recent newspaper reports, several states have passed or are considering laws making an adult liable in a shooting involving injury or death when a loaded gun was left where it could be picked up by a minor.

Schools and Weapons

Several states also passed laws in 1994 that strengthen prohibitions against weapons possession on school grounds.

- In Indiana, a package of measures designed to crack down on youth violence that was enacted in March included a provision that enhanced the penalty for carrying a gun without a license on school property or within 1,000 feet of school property. The charge of carrying a gun without a license was increased from a misdemeanor, punishable by a maximum of one year in prison and a $5,000 fine, to a felony, punishable by six months to three years in prison, and a maximum of $10,000 in fines. If the offense is committed on or near school grounds, the violator faces two to eight years in prison.
- A new law in New York prohibits any type of gun, including airguns and spring guns, and any ammunition, including blank cartridges, on school grounds. Alabama, Florida, Kentucky, and Michigan also specifically prohibited weapons possession on school grounds, and Arizona passed a law prohibiting handgun possession on the campuses of publicly supported colleges.

Courts, Juveniles and Guns

At least five states have changed the laws that govern the way court systems treat juveniles charged with crimes involving the use of firearms.

- Maryland has passed a measure providing that juvenile courts no longer have original jurisdiction over a minor who is more than 14 years old and is charged with a violent crime or a crime involving firearm use.
- In Indiana, juvenile courts no longer have jurisdiction over minors who carry handguns without a license.
- Wisconsin Gov. Tommy G. Thompson (R) also has signed legislation changing the rules for juvenile court jurisdiction in crimes committed with handguns.
- New legislation in Virginia requires judges to release information on minors over 16 years old who have been found delinquent of a felony involving a firearm, or who have been charged with such a crime and are fugitives from the law. Similarly, courts in Illinois now are allowed to release the names of juveniles who have been adjudicated delinquent in a crime involving a firearm.

Outlook for 1995 Legislative Session

Increases in juvenile violence in this country have intensified public concern about the adequacy of existing controls on juveniles' possession of firearms. In turn, public policymakers and legislators have broadened the scope of their response to juvenile violence from a primary emphasis on enhancing sanctions on juveniles who commit crimes involving firearms to enacting prohibitions or increasing restrictions on juveniles' access to firearms.

This press for solutions to increasing juvenile gun violence including calls for greater controls on juveniles' possession of firearms, is likely to continue into states' 1995 legislative sessions. State legislators in New Jersey and Virginia, the only two states where legislation will be carried over from the

1994 to the 1995 legislative sessions, will resume consideration of measures relating to juvenile and firearms.²

Among the seven bills pending in New Jersey are proposals that would create gun-free school zones, automatically waive juveniles charged with possession of a firearm on school grounds to criminal court for trial; and establish mandatory sentences for juveniles who are convicted of a second firearms violation. In Virginia, state legislators will consider two measures relating to juveniles possession of handguns and other firearms and one bill to prohibit the possession of firearms on school property.

² In general, state legislatures are prohibited by their state constitutions from carrying over legislation from one session to another when there is an intervening general election. In 1994, all but four states, including New Jersey and Virginia, held general elections. The remaining two states -- Mississippi and Louisiana -- prohibit any carryover of legislation between sessions.

Alaska

ALASKA STAT. §11.61.200 - A person commits the crime of misconduct involving weapons in the third degree if he knowingly possesses a firearm capable of being concealed on one's person after having been convicted of a felony or adjudicated a delinquent minor for conduct that would constitute a felony if committed by an adult; or possesses a firearm on which the manufacturer's serial number has been removed, covered, altered, or destroyed with the intent of rendering the firearm untraceable; or possesses a prohibited weapon. A prohibited weapon is defined as a device designed, made, or adapted to muffle the report of a firearm or a firearm that is capable of shooting more than one shot automatically, or a rifle or shotgun with a short barrel. It is an affirmative defense to a prosecution under this provision if a period of 10 years or more has elapsed between the date of the person's adjudication and the date of the violation, or if the prohibited weapon was possessed in accordance with the National Firearms Act. Peace officers are excepted from the provision relating to prohibited weapons.

ALASKA STAT. §11.61.220 - A person commits the crime of misconduct involving weapons in the fifth degree if the person is an unemancipated minor under 16 who possesses a firearm without the consent of a parent or guardian; knowingly possesses a concealed weapon or a loaded firearm any place where intoxicating liquor is sold for consumption on the premises. A person also commits the crime of misconduct involving weapons in the fifth degree if he possesses a firearm or defensive weapon without permission within the grounds of or on a parking lot immediately adjacent to a public or private preschool or school, except that a person 21 or older may possess an unloaded firearm or defensive weapon in the trunk of a motor vehicle or encased in a closed container. It is also illegal to possess a firearm within the grounds of or on a parking lot immediately adjacent to a child care center, other than a private residence. Violation of this provision is a misdemeanor. It is an affirmative defense to prosecution if the person owns the property upon which he possesses the weapon; is engaged in a lawful recreational activity such as hunting; is engaged in a lawful outdoor activity that requires the carrying of a weapon for personal protection; or is the holder of a valid permit to carry a concealed handgun. The provisions do not apply to peace officers acting within the scope of their employment. It is also an affirmative defense if the defendant owns or leases the business premises, or if the defendant is employed by the owner or lessee of the premises.

ALASKA STAT. §11.46.270 - It is unlawful to possess a firearm or its component parts knowing that the serial number or identification mark placed on it by the manufacturer or owner has been defaced, erased, or otherwise altered with the intent of causing interruption to the ownership of another.

ARIZ. REV. STAT. ANN. §13-912.01 - A person who was adjudicated delinquent and whose period of probation has been completed, or a person who has been discharged from probation, may have his right to possess or carry a gun or firearm restored. If the person's adjudication was for a dangerous or serious offense, burglary, or arson, that person may not file for restoration of his right to possess or carry a gun or firearm until the person attains 30 years of age. If the person's adjudication was for any other felony offense, the person may not file for restoration of his right to possess or carry a gun or firearm for two years from the date of his discharge.

ARIZ. REV. STAT. ANN. §13-3102 - A person commits misconduct involving weapons by knowingly carrying a deadly weapon without a permit; possessing a prohibited weapon; possessing a weapon if the person is a prohibited possessor; possessing a defaced deadly weapon knowing the weapon was defaced; or possessing a deadly weapon on school grounds, in an election polling place without authorization, or at a commercial nuclear generating station without authorization. Prohibited weapons include firearms capable of shooting more than one shot automatically, short-barreled rifles, and shotguns. A prohibited possessor is a person who has been found to constitute a danger to himself or to others pursuant to a court order and whose court-ordered treatment has not been terminated; a person who has been convicted anywhere of a felony involving violence or possession and use of a deadly weapon; or a person who at the time of possession is serving a term of imprisonment in any correctional facility or who is on parole, work furlough, or home arrest. The provision relating to carrying a deadly weapon without a permit does not apply to a person in his dwelling, on his business premises, or on real property owned or leased by that person. All provisions, except the one relating to prohibited possessors, do not apply to peace officers, military personnel, or specifically licensed or authorized persons. revocation of his driver's license. The section does not apply to a person who is between 14 and 18 who is engaged in lawful recreational activity at established ranges where discharge of a firearm is not prohibited. ARIZ. REV. STAT. ANN. §13-3112 - A permit to carry a concealed weapon may not be issued to persons under 21. It is illegal for a person who previously was adjudicated delinquent to possess, use, or carry a firearm within 10 years from the date of his adjudication or his release or escape from custody. If the person fails to present a permit, he commits a misdemeanor.

Arkansas

ARK. CODE ANN. §5-73-103 - Unless specifically authorized by law, no person who has been convicted of a felony, adjudicated mentally ill, or committed involuntarily to any mental institution shall possess or own any firearm . The governor has the authority to restore the right of a convicted felon or adjudicated delinquent to own and possess a firearm without granting a pardon if the underlying conviction or adjudication occurred more than eight years ago.

ARK. CODE ANN. §5-73-104 - A person commits the offense of criminal use of prohibited weapons if, except as authorized by law, he possesses a machine gun, sawed-off shotgun or rifle, or firearm specially made or specially adapted for silent discharge. Violation of this provision is a felony.

ARK. CODE ANN. §5-73-119 - No person under 18 shall possess a handgun. Violation of this provision is a misdemeanor. A subsequent violation of this provision is a felony. The offense is enhanced if the person previously has been adjudicated delinquent for a violation of this section or for any offense that would be a felony if committed by an adult. No person shall possess a handgun upon school property or on a school bus or at a school bus stop. A violation of this provision is a felony. No person shall possess a handgun upon the property of the publicly supported institutions of higher education, on or about his person, in a vehicle occupied by him, or otherwise readily available for use with a purpose to employ it as a weapon against a person. It is a defense if the person is engaging in a school-approved educational course or sporting activity; if the person is in his own dwelling or place of business or on property in which he has a possessory or proprietary interest; if he is or assisting a law enforcement officer, prison guard, security guard, or member of the military acting in the scope of his duties; if he is hunting with a handgun that is authorized for that purpose; if he is participating in a hunting safety course; or if he is a minor engaged in a lawful competition or other recreational shooting under the supervision of his parent or legal guardian or is travelling to or from that activity with an unloaded handgun.

CODE ANN. §5-73-205 - It is presumed that possession is for an aggressive purpose if the gun is found on premises that are not owned or rented by the person; if the gun is in the possession of an unnaturalized foreign-born person; if the gun has not been properly registered; or if shells of 30 or larger caliber are found in the immediate vicinity of the gun.

ARK. CODE ANN. §5-73-206 - The presence of a machine gun in any room, boat, or vehicle shall be evidence of the possession or use of the machine gun by each person occupying the room, boat, or vehicle where the weapon is found.

ARK. CODE ANN. §9-27-318 - A juvenile may be tried as an adult if the conduct in which he engaged would be a felony if committed by an adult, and the juvenile is at least 16. He may be tried as an adult if he is 14 or 15 and engages in certain conduct, including possession of a handgun on school property; second illegal possession of a handgun; unlawful discharge of a firearm from a motor vehicle; any felony committed while armed with a firearm; or criminal use of a prohibited weapon.

1994 ARK. ACTS 36 - The definition of "delinquent juvenile" was amended to include a juvenile who possesses a handgun.

California
