

Management Issues

Introduction

The presence of youthful offenders in facilities designed and operated for adult offenders creates issues for correctional administrators. The strategies for addressing these issues vary widely among states, depending on the system for committing youth to adult correctional facilities, the nature of the facilities utilized, and the experience of the staff dealing with youthful offenders. To better assess the issues facing correctional administrators and the management strategies currently in place, the project team visited several states with adult prisons and jails that house juveniles.

Table 12 presents summary data on the institutions that participated in this review. Sites were selected based on their distinct programs and the number of youthful offenders incarcerated in the adult facilities. One cannot assume that the facilities visited are typical of all adult facilities (jails and prisons) holding youthful inmates. The objective was to visit several facilities to document how various correctional systems are dealing with this issue.

The project team examined several components at each site. Members focused on gaining an appreciation of the way administrators perceive the youthful offender issue and identifying the management strategies each jurisdiction has developed. The findings of the project team are summarized below for each system and facility visited.

Arizona Department of Corrections

Arizona State Prison Complex-Eyman, Florence, Arizona

Program description. The Special Management Unit (SMU) II for minors at the Arizona State Prison Complex-Eyman serves as the state's super maximum-security facility for the incarceration of offenders who represent a threat to the orderly operation of the state prison system. Youthful offenders are incarcerated in a self-contained unit within this institution, which also houses the department's death row and specialized mental health unit.

Arizona law mandates separate facilities for youthful offenders. The state maintains another 114-bed unit at Rincon for youthful offenders who are sentenced as adults. Placement in SMU results from serious disciplinary infractions at Rincon. In effect, SMU functions as a disciplinary segregation unit for the department's youthful offenders sentenced to the adult correctional facility.

Constructed in 1997, SMU is a state-of-the-art super maximum-security facility. The unit is designed to hold 20 juvenile offenders and currently operates at full capacity. All functions related to the operation of the unit are provided onsite. Juveniles’ movements to programs and services outside the unit are controlled by rigid schedules and physical barriers that ensure total separation from the adult population. The facility is currently under a consent decree relating to crowded living conditions, program availability, medical and mental health services, disciplinary policy, and access to legal services and mail.

Arizona uses an objective classification system to guide placement in the super-maximum custody status. The classification instrument assigns points for a variety of factors, including the nature of the offense, escape history, and misconduct while in prison. The resulting score can be reduced by remaining free of serious misconduct while at SMU and by completing specific programs, such as the GED program.

The unit functions as a typical super maximum-security facility, allowing residents limited personal property, prohibiting audiovisual equipment, and requiring residents to wear a uniform. Youth are permitted to exercise outside the cell for three 1-hour periods each week and may take three showers per week. Visits are noncontact and limited in number and duration. Inmates are shackled and escorted by officers during all movements outside the cell. The day-to-day operation of the unit is similar to the operation of typical adult, super maximum-security units, with emphasis placed on discipline and control.

Services. SMU has a well-conceived array of programs for youthful offenders. Youth must participate in and complete two of three programs, listed below.

- ❑ Hazelden's: A Design for Living. This substance abuse treatment program is based on the Alcohol Anonymous 12-step program. The course consists of reading short booklets and completing a test, writing an essay, or both. Successful completion of the program reduces an offender's classification points.
- ❑ Cage Your Rage. This anger-management program is based on techniques developed at the Saskatchewan Penitentiary in Canada and assists offenders in recognizing feelings of anger, their causes, and methods to control and modify anger. This program is mandatory for all unit residents.
- ❑ Biblio Program. This literacy self-help program is based on readings and essays from a list of materials. Upon completion of a reading assignment, the youth must write an essay on the material's relevance to his life.

Program participation is based on a clinical assessment of each youth's needs. The program offerings are designed to accommodate the disciplinary structure of SMU.

Youth must comply with grooming standards, attend study periods, and maintain their cells in accordance with SMU regulations. All youth are expected to participate in physical fitness, mental alertness, and recreational programs, which include word-search contests, puzzles, and fitness challenges and testing.

The facility offers a range of educational programs, including mandatory GED preparation. Residents who already have diplomas must complete a book report every 2 weeks. Vocational courses are offered, but college-level courses are not available. Each resident is afforded 3 hours each day to attend classes. Instruction is provided in an area with adjacent study cells facing a common instruction area. In this manner, instruction can be provided on a face-to-face basis with group interaction, while maintaining a high degree of security. Instruction is enhanced with a variety of sophisticated instructional aids, and each study cell is wired for video and audio instructional systems controlled by the instructor.

This learning environment results in a positive atmosphere. Class participation is high, and residents seem to value the program and appear motivated to achieve their educational goals. Because educational programs provide one of the few opportunities that youth have for out-of-cell time and interaction, great significance is attached to participation in them.

Medical staff, including doctors, nurses, and mental health professionals, are available daily. Youth with serious mental health issues are not eligible for the program. There are no facilities in SMU for intensive mental health services, and sight and separation issues make using the larger facility's mental health unit problematic. On the day of the site visit, 20 percent of the residents were receiving mental health treatment. Despite the prevalence of mental health issues in adult super maximum facilities, SMU staff did not indicate any special mental health needs for the youthful offender population. The relatively low level of serious mental health issues may be attributable to careful screening of candidates for the unit. A review of files did not reveal any indicators of serious mental health issues (e.g., suicide attempts) and showed that mental health services were routinely being provided.

Offender profiles. Of the 20 youth housed in SMU II, more than half were sentenced to prison for violent crimes, including 7 sentenced for serious property offenses. The main reason for their placement in SMU II was typically a serious infraction of department rules involving an assault on staff or on other inmates or gang activity. Half of the residents were Hispanic, six were black, and four were white. Sixteen of the residents were 17 years old, three were 16 years old, and one was 15, the youngest resident ever housed at the facility. The longest period of commitment to SMU was 13 months, and the minimum stay was 6 months.

A review of a sample of the case files of unit residents confirmed that most had a history of violent offenses. The following cases are representative of the backgrounds of youth incarcerated at SMU:

- ❑ Offender one was a 15-year-old serving a minimum of 5 years for assault and possession of a weapon for his involvement in a gang-related, drive-by shooting. His background showed no prior juvenile or adult criminal record but indicated a history of alcohol and substance abuse. He had completed the ninth grade. His placement at SMU II was the result of an assault on staff.
- ❑ Offender two was a 16-year-old serving a minimum of 8 years for armed robbery. At the time of this offense, he was on adult probation for other offenses. He has an extensive juvenile record, including several convictions for weapons-related charges. He was transferred to SMU II for multiple incidents, including inciting a riot, creating a work stoppage, and participating in an institutional disturbance.

- ❑ Offender three was a 16-year-old serving a minimum of 5 years for aggravated assault. The offense occurred during his participation in a drive-by shooting. His background indicated a history of alcohol and drug abuse that began at age 12. Prior to his latest arrest, he had more than 20 arrests as a juvenile for a variety of offenses. He was transferred to SMU II for multiple episodes of misconduct, none of which involved violent behavior.
- ❑ Offender four was a 16-year-old serving a minimum of 3.5 years for possession of a stolen vehicle, assault, and aggravated assault. His background indicated 10 prior juvenile arrests and 3 prior dispositions in adult court. He was transferred to SMU II for threatening an employee and other episodes of misconduct.
- ❑ Offender five was a 16-year-old serving a minimum of 10 years for attempted murder committed during a gang-related, drive-by shooting. His background indicated no previous criminal record but showed extensive alcohol and drug abuse. He was transferred to SMU II for assault.
- ❑ Offender six was a 16-year-old serving a minimum of 18 years for manslaughter. His record showed prior juvenile dispositions. He was transferred to SMU II for assaulting staff.

Arizona laws are flexible in their criteria for the transfer of a juvenile to adult court. Because of this flexibility, the youthful offender population has committed a wide range of offenses. Most of the offenses described in the case files are serious, but several would not qualify for transfer in other states. Four of the six offenders received a sentence for a lesser offense resulting from a plea bargain.

Alcohol and drug use as well as gang involvement were frequently noted in the offender's background. Most surprising was the absence of any prior criminal record for two offenders. A variety of disciplinary infractions had resulted in placement at SMU II.

General observations. SMU II appears to be the only institution in the United States that provides a super maximum-security environment for youthful offenders. However, this level of security is more a function of the way Arizona has chosen to manage and provide programs for this population than a reflection of the nature of the offenders. Although violent and disruptive, the offenders housed in SMU II are not significantly different from the juvenile offenders found in the segregation units of most maximum-security juvenile correctional facilities across the country. SMU II's innovative approach to programming for these difficult-to-manage youth is unique. The juvenile unit at SMU II functions as a controlled setting for the delivery of services to juveniles who have been disruptive to the general facility population.

Within the tightly controlled context of a super maximum-security facility, SMU II staff have developed programs that complement the facility security. Staff use the control aspects of the environment to increase incentives to participate in educational and treatment programs. The program offerings are well developed, are specific to population needs, and have written criteria to evaluate progress and performance. Moreover, the offenders' progress through these programs is connected to the reclassification of the offender back to the general population. The concerns that might be expressed about the impact of a maximum-security environment on youth appear to be substantially mitigated by the quality of the programs offered at the facility and the incentives for offenders to use these offerings productively. The enhanced control and discipline of SMU II may provide the degree of structure required to successfully control and provide program services for certain types of youthful offenders.

Florida Department of Corrections

Brevard Correctional Institution, Sharpes, Florida

Florida Correctional Institution, Lowell, Florida

Hillsborough Correctional Institution, Riverview, Florida

Indian River Correctional Institution, Vero Beach, Florida

Program descriptions. The state of Florida operates a youthful offender program for inmates up to age 24 who have received an adult sentence and have been committed to the Department of Corrections. Offenders in this age group with an adult sentence of less than 10 years are eligible for the program. Offenders under the age of 24 who have been convicted of murder or who are serving life sentences are not eligible for the program. Florida law also permits juvenile court judges to certify individuals meeting these criteria into the program. The department can also designate individuals for placement into the program.

The vast majority of youthful offenders in Florida, age 17 or younger, are participating in the youthful offender program. Exceptions are those youth who have been decertified from the program and transferred to adult correctional facilities. These decertifications are generally for disciplinary reasons. Decertifications have also been made to create space for new admissions to the program. Statutes allow the department to recommend sentence reductions to the court for youth who have completed the program and appear ready for reintegration into society. Several facilities report making recommendations for sentence reductions to the department's central office, but to date, none of these recommendations have been forwarded to the court.

The department designates specific institutions to house the youthful offender program to insulate participants from the general adult prison population. These youthful offender facilities are further categorized by the typical age of their residents. Facilities are designated for two populations: (1) youth between ages 13 and 18 and (2) youth between ages 19 and 24. In practice, however, both types of youthful offender facilities house significant numbers of offenders of all ages. These facilities house youthful offenders with the full range of custody classifications, which include minimum, medium, and close management classes. Staff at these facilities must undergo a 40-hour training program on managing youthful offenders.

Services. Three youthful offender institutions were visited: Brevard, Hillsborough, and Indian River Correctional Institutions. The team also visited the Florida Correctional Institution, an institution for adult female offenders that manages a small youthful offender program. The programs at each facility were similar and are described below.

Central to all four facilities is the Extended Day Program. This program uses a quasi-boot camp structure emphasizing constant activity to keep residents productively occupied in exercise activities, classes, or work detail throughout the day. Programming begins at 5:30 a.m. with military drill and exercise. School programs operate from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. weekdays, with other scheduled program activities on weekends. The program operates in a regimented, military atmosphere. Residents are required to ask staff permission to pass by, to stand at attention in the presence of ranked staff, and to use “Yes sir” and “No sir” when speaking. The program uses a ranking system, signified by the color of hat the inmate is required to wear, for access to privileges such as telephone use, commissary access, and visitation rights. Advancement through these ranks is based on good conduct and satisfactory progress in the program.

The premise of the Extended Day Program is that youthful offenders are volatile and impulsive, so more intensive levels of activity are required to manage their behavior. Essentially, the program tries to wear down offenders physically so that they have neither the time nor the energy to engage in misconduct. A high level of activity and structure creates a more receptive attitude toward programming, particularly educational programming. Resistant youth are faced with the prospect of transfer to an adult correctional facility.

Florida’s youthful offender facilities offer standard GED programs, special education services, and vocational training. The facilities also offer medical and mental health treatment services, including therapeutic units for drug and alcohol abuse. In assessing program needs, staff identified a need for a violence interruption program and a life-skills program to assist residents in reintegrating into society.

Florida has attempted to separate youthful offenders from the adult population by dedicating facilities for the youthful offender program. However, the state's definition of a youthful offender, essentially any offender between the ages of 13 and 24, is broad. Within the youthful offender facilities, attempts are made to further separate offenders by age and type of offense, but program activities generally mix program residents of all ages. The department modifies the Extended Day Program for very young offenders.

Because of their small number, female youthful offenders are incarcerated with adults at the Florida Correctional Institution. The youthful offenders at this facility are housed in a dormitory separate from the adult population. Although they participate in the Extended Day Program, youthful offenders are mixed with the facility's adult population for all other programs and services.

Offender profiles. File reviews of youth incarcerated at these facilities were consistent with the data collected by the surveys. The majority of youthful offenders held in Florida correctional facilities have a history of serious violent offenses, with a smaller number having lengthy criminal records for property, weapons, and drug-related offenses. In many cases, the offense for which they were sentenced had been plea-bargained from a more serious criminal offense. Among the four facilities visited, approximately 50 percent of the resident population were committed for serious violent offenses such as murder, rape, or aggravated assault. The remainder of the population was composed of serial property offenders, many with a record of violent criminal activity.

The Florida Youthful Offender Program includes offenders up to age 24, but in the facilities visited, the majority of the offenders were either 16 or 17 years old. A small number of 14- and 15-year-olds were also noted in each facility. The average length of stay in the facilities was 17 months. However, this figure does not differentiate between offenders released from the correctional system and offenders transferred to adult facilities to serve out the balance of their sentences. The ethnic composition of the population at the facilities was similar to the racial breakdown of the larger Florida correctional system, with 55 percent being African American.

Staff reported significant frustration in dealing with the youthful offender population, describing them as "impulsive" and "much more difficult to manage" than adult offenders. Moreover, the unpredictable behavior of the 16- and 17-year-old population seemed to spread to the older residents, influencing their behavior. Although the department has developed a standard 40-hour youthful offender training program to equip staff with skills to manage these youth, staff report that the training curriculum needs to be updated to better reflect the type of problems they must face.

One frequently mentioned issue was that Florida's reduction of gain-time eligibility, in conjunction with the advent of truth in sentencing, severely reduced incentives for good behavior among the population. With a diminished ability to reward good behavior in a tangible fashion, staff have not yet discovered a meaningful substitute to promote compliance with institutional rules. As a result, property damage, for example, is a major problem at the Hillsborough Correctional Institution, where supervision is complicated by the poor design of the facility.

An interesting observation made by staff at several facilities was that the recent increase in the capacity of the Florida Youth Agency has taken substantial pressure off the adult correctional system. In the past, the small capacity of the Florida juvenile correctional system created pressure on the courts to transfer youthful offenders to the adult correctional system. This trend is now beginning to reverse, and many youth, particularly less serious offenders traditionally sent to the adult correctional system, are now being incarcerated in the juvenile system.

The most notable facility visited was the Indian River Correctional Institution. This facility was distinguished by a strong staff commitment to encourage rehabilitation and to create opportunities for positive change. While the facility's mission and program structure were similar to those of the other youthful offender facilities, the staff at Indian River were exceptional in their dedication to service and their realistic, but positive, view of their ability to change the inmates' lives. Cynicism and staff burnout, characteristics of corrections professionals working with youthful offenders, were not evident.

The facility is unique in several ways. A volunteer services program in 1997 attracted more than 2,000 volunteers to provide services to residents of the facility. The community of Indian River gives between $12,000 and $15,000 each year to the institution to provide items and services not funded by the state's budget. Also unique to the facility is its orientation program, during which department heads personally list the rules and describe opportunities available to newly arrived residents. This esprit de corps and the positive impact of this programming were evident in the orderly appearance and operation of the institution.

General observations. The Florida Department of Corrections has taken a proactive stance in developing a comprehensive approach to the incarceration of young offenders. In its designated youthful offender facilities, the department offers standard educational and treatment programs, as well as the Extended Day Program that seeks to address the energy level, aggression, and impulsiveness of youthful offenders. Although administrators attempt to distinguish between very young offenders and young adults in housing assignments, no provisions are made to provide developmentally appropriate programming specific to the needs of 14- to 17-year-olds. Given the unique issues and needs of adolescents, the Florida program may compromise its effectiveness by targeting too broad an age group.

Virginia Department of Corrections

St. Brides Correctional Center, Chesapeake, Virginia

Program description. In September 1990, the Virginia Department of Corrections designated St. Brides Correctional Center as the housing facility for the Youthful Offender Program (YOP). The purpose of the program is to provide judges with the option of assigning youthful offenders who have received an indeterminate sentence to a facility with an intensive, therapeutic environment.

St. Brides Correctional Center shares a 180-acre site in Chesapeake, Virginia, with the Indian Creek Correctional Center. The institution is a security level II (medium-security) facility with a total bed capacity of 570. Twelve of the beds located in housing unit B are allotted for participants who are being evaluated for admission to YOP, which has a capacity of 65 beds. Only individuals who were under 21 at the time of their offense are eligible for the program. All inmates assigned to the program are housed in single cells in housing unit D, which contains no adult offenders. However, inmates assigned to the unit participate in work activity and educational programs with inmates from the general population.

The Code of Virginia permits individuals convicted of felonies to serve a 60-day evaluation at St. Brides to determine their suitability for YOP. To be eligible for evaluation, the offender

- Must not have a prior adult felony conviction.
- Must not have been convicted for an offense involving a firearm.
- Must not have been convicted of a Class I felony, a misdemeanor involving injury to a person, or a crime involving damage to or destruction of property.
- Must have been over the age of 16 and under the age of 21 when the crime was committed.
- Must have had a judge determine that the offender was reasonably capable of rehabilitation.

Once admitted to St. Brides for assessment, inmates are required to adhere to a strict regime of rules and regulations. The inmate's level of cooperation is reported to the sentencing court and affects the determination for placement in YOP. These regulations include personal hygiene, participation in work programs, compliance with smoke-free policies, compliance with all established institutional rules and regulations, and agreement through a signed contract to maintain an acceptable level of program performance.

During the assessment period, inmates are required to participate in the following programs:

- ❑ Weekly discussion groups conducted by staff counselors.
- ❑ Weekly substance abuse education sessions.
- ❑ Viewing of television programs and videos on issues relevant to their successful return to society.

Upon arrival, each inmate is assigned to a counselor who completes the initial forms, including a social history assessment. The facility also requests a presentence investigation report from the sentencing court's probation staff. These materials are forwarded to the assessment committee, chaired by the assistant warden of programs. Committee members include the treatment program supervisor, the senior psychologist, program counselors, a clinical social worker, a representative from the school programs, a representative from the security staff, and a representative from the Virginia Parole Board.

When the assessment is completed, the sentencing court is advised of the committee's recommendation and the offender is returned to the sentencing county to await a decision. If approved and sentenced to YOP, the inmate is returned to St. Brides.

YOP participants may be terminated from the program through a due process hearing conducted by the Institutional Classification Committee. Termination can be recommended in response to intractable behavior, such as repeated violations of facility rules, refusal to participate in mandated programs, and engaging in activities or behavior that is disruptive to others in the program. The inmate may also request termination. If approved for removal from the program, the inmate is sent to another corrections facility for completion of sentence. If the inmate remains in the program, the parole board monitors his progress and he remains under its jurisdiction until release.

Services. All inmates admitted to YOP are required to attend a full range of academic and vocational programs. Vocational courses include electronics, auto mechanics, sheet metal, carpentry, plumbing, auto body repair, printing, and other apprenticeship programs.

Individual treatment plans are developed based on the inmate's history and current needs. Available programs include substance abuse education, counseling and support groups, Alcoholics Anonymous, sex offender treatment, anger management, and life-skills development. Each inmate participates in a weekly "issues discussion group," conducted by treatment staff and peer leaders. Standard medical and mental health services are available to participants in the program.

Offender profiles. One-third of the YOP's 22-bed capacity is for offenders under age 18. Seventeen-year-olds make up the largest component of the program's participants at 72 percent, with the remaining 18 percent being 16-year-olds. The racial composition of the program's participants is similar to the department's overall prison population; 72 percent of inmates are black and 18 percent are white. As with youthful offender programs in other states, participants in YOP tend to be violent offenders. More than 68 percent of the state's youthful offenders are being held for serious violent crimes.

General observations. The Virginia Department of Corrections recognizes the special issues and circumstances that surround the incarceration of youthful offenders. Particularly noteworthy in Virginia is the special attention given to screening potential program participants to ensure that services provided will fit the needs of the offender. The most effective attribute of the program may be its unique approach to offering an indeterminate sentence within a relatively rigid, determinate sentencing structure. The option of tying time served and productive participation together in well-structured therapeutic, educational, and rehabilitative programs offers a powerful incentive for offenders to change their attitudes and behavior. The indeterminate length of participation in the program, in conjunction with the use of individual treatment plans, explicitly recognizes the differing needs of individual offenders in the program. Virginia's approach to the incarceration of youth appears to reinstate rehabilitation as a priority for youthful offenders.

New York City Department of Corrections

Adolescent Reception and Detention Center and Rose M. Singer Center, Rikers Island, New York

Program descriptions. Youthful offenders in the New York City Department of Corrections have been remanded to the department's custody by judicial action, at both pre- and postadjudication stages. The youthful offender population includes defendants awaiting trial, persons convicted of a crime and sentenced to 1 year or less, parole and probation violators, and persons sentenced to more than 1 year who are awaiting transfer to the New York state prison system. Currently, the department houses 526 offenders between the ages of 15 and 17.

In 1980, a state law reduced the age of criminal responsibility from 18 to 16. Anyone charged with any offense who has reached his or her 16th birthday is processed through law enforcement, the courts, and corrections as an adult. Recognizing the special needs of this population, the department established the Adolescent Reception and Detention Center (ARDC) at Rikers Island in East Elmhurst, New York, to hold young male adults, 16 to 18 years old. Today, most incarcerated youthful offenders are held in ARDC.

ARDC houses adolescent male detainees ages 16 to 18 and has a capacity of 2,548 inmates. Juveniles under age 16 who are charged as adults (labeled juvenile offenders, or JOs in New York) are held at Spofford, the city's juvenile detention facility. ARDC houses inmates in modular dormitories, “sprung” structures (rigid frame tents capable of housing 40 or more inmates), and cells. Female youthful offenders are held at the Rose M. Singer Center, which houses one of the nation’s few prison nurseries, with a capacity for 25 infants.

Services. The responsibility for the education of incarcerated juveniles is assumed by the New York City Board of Education. Teachers from the city system provide classroom instruction in the morning and early afternoon, with classes ending at 2 p.m. All juveniles age 17 and under must attend; for 18-year-olds school is optional. As a result of a very structured communications process between the principal of the Rikers education program and other city schools, released offenders may reenroll in the city’s public educational system without curriculum adjustment or remedial needs that might result from their detention and concomitant absence from their local schools. The dedication of the teachers and principal at ARDC was impressive and indicative of the quality of the educational program at the facility. The rapport between security staff and the teachers was also positive.

The facility has drug treatment resources available to adolescents, provided through a contract that serves all Rikers Island facilities. Mental health services are also available to juveniles, including group, individual, and family counseling, in addition to regular social services. Inmates also have access to an up-to-date law library and support staff. The facility boasts an impressive computer lab, with state-of-the-art equipment and a trained computer teacher. Religious services are available, along with a limited mentor program.

The most striking component of ARDC, however, was not a specific program but rather was a broader environmental issue: safety. The warden and staff talked about department efforts to reduce the level of incidents between inmates, as well as those between inmates and staff. According to staff, inmate-on-inmate assaults have been reduced as a result of several key factors. Administrators have established a zero-tolerance policy for violence and possession of weapons. Prosecutors vigorously pursue extended sentences for offenders who have committed violent acts within the jail. In addition, the command staff at the jail have placed a high priority on improving intelligence on gang-related activities and plans.

To aid officers in identifying potential sources of trouble, inmates who violate institutional rules must wear special identification badges. To enhance the institution’s capacity to respond to serious incidents, the facility’s emergency services unit (tactical response team) has been expanded to 100 full-time employees. The administrative staff place a high priority on communication with the offender population, and meetings are held regularly between an elected inmate council and the warden and his senior staff. The result of these efforts is a higher level of safety within the facility, which encourages the pursuit of educational and programmatic opportunities.

The leadership of the facility appears committed to meeting the educational, social, vocational, and recreational needs of youthful offenders held at the facility. The warden emphasizes that the qualified staff have a profound impact on the success of any attempts at innovation. Projects are being pushed forward to address the physical plant needs of the department and areas conducive to rehabilitating youthful offenders. All new correctional staff are required to have earned at least 64 postsecondary credit hours; extensive background investigations are a prerequisite for new employees.

The New York system is currently under court order relating to crowding, fire safety, staffing, program availability, recreation, mental health programs, food service, medical services, visitation policies, and the physical condition of the facilities.

Offender profiles. Currently, 561 youthful offenders are held by the New York City Department of Corrections. Approximately 53 percent of the youthful offender population is being held for a serious violent offense, 23 percent for a drug-related offense, 11 percent for a property offense, and 13 percent for other nonviolent offenses. In terms of race/ethnicity, the youthful offender population in the New York City system has a somewhat higher proportion of black offenders than the adult jail population. More than 67 percent of youth held in the jail are black, 29 percent are Hispanic, and 4 percent are white. By contrast, the adult population is 58 percent black, 37 percent Hispanic, and 5 percent white. Sixty-five percent of the youthful offender population is 17 years of age, and 35 percent is age 16.

General observations. The age of criminal responsibility in New York is 16, meaning that 16- and 17-year-olds are automatically processed through the courts as adults. Despite their legal status as adults, the New York City Department of Corrections has recognized the special needs of youthful offenders and has established a separate facility and separate programs to serve this population. The most impressive aspect of youthful offender programming in the jail system was the articulated expectation that the warden, senior managers, officers, and nonsworn personnel should function as “change agents” for the youthful offender population at ARDC. These staff understand the need for a continuum of services for youthful offenders, which extends into the community and involves family members or positive authority figures.

The recent initiative to improve the qualification standards for staff is a positive step toward realizing this expectation. Staff should be offered opportunities to participate in professional training seminars and symposiums to further enhance their professional knowledge. Also significant is the department’s commitment to enhancing the safety of staff and residents through a variety of measures designed to improve rule enforcement, intelligence, and communication between the administration and residents.

Underlying the department’s strategy to manage the issues associated with youthful offenders is its performance- and accountability-based approach to management, the Total Efficiency Accountability Management System (TEAMS). This system stresses management responsibility for program quality and operating effectiveness and has improved conditions throughout the jail. The commitment of senior staff to achieving the goals identified for the department's youthful offender program reflects the TEAMS philosophy.

Philadelphia Department of Corrections

House of Correction, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Program description. In Philadelphia, certain juveniles charged with serious felonies may be tried in the adult court system. Until recently, the number of juveniles charged as adults was relatively small, which was not a reflection of the number of serious felony offenders in Philadelphia, but was instead indicative of the intricacies of the waiver process required before a juvenile could be charged as an adult. Juveniles charged with serious offenses were first processed in the juvenile system, where a judicial officer would hold a waiver hearing to determine if the best interests of society and the juvenile would be served by trying the juvenile in the adult system.

In recent years, the procedure for transferring a juvenile to adult court has changed. Today, in addition to the waiver procedure, certain charges are "direct filed," meaning the charging decision by the prosecutor dictates whether the juvenile will be tried in the adult system.

Currently, all arrested and detained youthful offenders are first transported to the Youth Study Center, a multistory facility in downtown Philadelphia that functions as the central intake for all juveniles. The majority of the juveniles held are under the control and supervision of the Human Services Department, and the fifth floor of the facility is a closed-custody ward used only to hold juveniles charged as adults, or "certified" juveniles. The ward can accommodate up to 37 youthful offenders.

When that facility is filled to capacity, youthful offenders are transferred to the C-2 or A-2 block of the House of Correction (HOC), one of the main jail institutions in the Philadelphia system housing predominantly adult male detainees. Together, the two blocks have an average daily population of approximately 60 juveniles. The units are physically separate from the main population and every effort is made to prevent any contact between adult inmates and juvenile offenders, including locking down the adult population when the juvenile population is being moved for meals or exercise. Once a juvenile is transferred to HOC, he is quarantined in a single cell for 72 hours (or longer, if on a weekend or holiday). During this time, the juvenile is screened for educational needs and mental health issues and undergoes a diagnostic interview with a social worker. Owing to time constraints, these tasks are not always completed within the prescribed timeframe.

Services. The model for all programs and procedures involving juveniles charged as adults in the Philadelphia system is the Game of Life Development (GOLD) program. The objective of the GOLD program is to develop a “positive-norm therapeutic community for youthful offenders.” Participation in the program is mandatory. Each youth receives an individual prescriptive plan for program participation, which is reviewed periodically during the youth’s residence.

The program establishes five levels of privileges and responsibilities. All residents begin at level one; when they satisfactorily complete one level they advancement to the next. Privileges associated with the different levels include access to radios, televisions, games, cards, and paying jobs.

Each day, the program calls for 2 hours of off-unit structured recreational activity and 1 hour of on-unit recreational activity to provide an outlet for the high energy levels associated with youthful offenders. Group therapy sessions cover such topics as anger management, stress management, conflict resolution, the psychology of achievement, communication skills, and self-esteem issues. Inmates may receive visitors for 1 hour each week.

Youthful offenders must participate in board of education-operated classes that are offered 5 days a week. Volunteers provide a number of supplementary programs. There is access to both medical and psychological treatment, as required by law.

Offender profiles. The most recent data available indicate that during 1998, 424 juveniles were charged as adults and detained in the Philadelphia prison system (in Pennsylvania, the term “prison” includes both traditional jail populations and state prison populations). The average length of stay was 211 days, reflecting the more serious charges for which the youth were held. In the same year, 28,290 inmates were received by the Philadelphia’s prison system, with an average stay of 79 days.

At HOC, 91 percent of the youthful offenders were detained for a serious violent offense, and 97 percent of the detainees at the Youth Study Center had been charged with a serious violent offense. In terms of race/ethnicity, 83 percent of the youthful offenders were black, compared with 72 percent of the adult jail population. The Philadelphia jail system also held a higher number of very young offenders than was seen in other jurisdictions. At the time of the survey, the jail system held one 11-year-old, two 14-year-olds, twelve 15-year-olds, and fifteen 16-year-olds. The balance of the youthful offender population was 17 years of age.

General observations. Both of the institutions housing youthful offenders are very old (the HOC cells date back to the late 1800s) and are very small, making direct supervision of the inmates impossible. This was also true at the Youth Study Center, even though the facility is newer. Conditions in both facilities were poor. The long average length of stay for detained youth in the jail system complicates the already difficult issue of providing a rehabilitative environment in grim, dark, old facilities with little access to natural light or exercise and few formalized programs for the juveniles. While the GOLD program has admirable goals and programmatic ideals that the staff seemed to understand and support, the goals do not seem reasonable given the physical limitations and small staff. HOC is currently under court orders relating to crowding, staffing, program availability, disciplinary practices, recreational opportunities, food service, medical service, law library access, staff training, and visitation policies.

Finally, in both New York and Philadelphia, staff were sensitive to the issues of a juvenile population, but facilities seemed to be operating under conditions that could not accommodate this philosophy. The facilities did not have the level of freedom observed in many juvenile halls, but there was much more freedom than that found in the typical jail, along with a greater sense of safety. In effect, it appears that juveniles held in these two adult facilities have more programming provided than their detained adult counterparts, but less than they would receive if they had been charged with and detained in the juvenile justice system.

Major Findings

There is substantial variation in each states' approaches to dealing with youthful offenders, in terms of definition, legal status, and programming. Staff in adult correctional facilities tend to find youthful offenders more volatile and more difficult to deal with. Integrating programming with a well-designed operating philosophy, as in Arizona, appears to enhance offender acceptance and enthusiasm for programming.

Most residents of surveyed facilities had backgrounds of violence or long criminal histories or both. Diverse strategies were employed to deal with the complex constellation of needs of the youthful offender population. Some systems focused on incentives for programming, whereas others focused on the safety and security of the institution. Older facilities are often challenged to provide sophisticated programming as they are limited by the size and construction of the physical structure. The inmate population brings with it two challenges that must be addressed. First, the serious and violent offense profiles of most youthful offenders pose significant safety and security issues to the operation of the facilities. A structured environment is required to maintain the orderly operation of the facilities, but given the juveniles' status, management techniques that do not employ massive force must be used. Second, this population's significant developmental, emotional, and cognitive issues can be addressed by appropriate programming. Further, the gender-specific needs of girls in the adult correctional system deserve equal attention. The expertise of the staff in these areas appears to be a critical link to the quality of services and the orderly operation of the facility.

Alternative Strategies and Technical Assistance

This report focuses on identifying the extent and characteristics of the youthful offender populations currently incarcerated in adult facilities and on documenting their conditions of confinement. These findings suggest that the phenomenon of youthful offender incarceration in adult correctional facilities is a burgeoning issue in many correctional systems across the nation. Correctional administrators need alternative strategies to address the issues associated with managing young offenders in an adult correctional environment while responding to their unique needs with developmentally appropriate programming. The following recommendations are offered for further research and present suggested topic areas in which the Bureau of Justice Assistance and other public and private agencies should be prepared to establish standards and to provide technical assistance to correctional agencies responsible for managing this growing population.

Classification Systems

The traditional classification instruments developed for and used with adult correctional populations do not take into account the special needs or the maturation issues presented by youthful offenders. Prison classification systems have been developed and validated on adult male populations and are not sensitive to the unique attributes and behaviors of youthful populations. These classification systems consist of both external and internal models.

External classification systems are used to determine whether an inmate should be placed in the general population or assigned to a special management unit. The latter consists of protective custody, administrative segregation, mental health, and medical care units. The former results in a designation of minimum, medium, close, or maximum custody. Assessments are also made on the types of programs or treatment services the inmate should participate in. Based on the custody and program/treatment needs, a determination is made on the most appropriate facility to which to transfer the inmate.

One suggestion is for adult correctional systems either to use classification systems that have been developed by the state's juvenile correctional agency or to develop their own system to be used for youth committed to their care. Such a classification system should be capable of assessing each youth with respect to their risk to public safety, institutional conduct, and specific program needs in the areas of mental health, substance abuse, education, vocational training, and medical care.

In addition to this type of an external classification assessment, an internal classification system needs to be established for each facility that houses these youth to ensure youthful offenders are not improperly housed with adult inmates. Such an internal system would consist of a plan that limits the housing units into which a youthful offender can be placed and the types of programs in which a youthful offender can participate within that facility.

Staff and Staff Training

The need for meaningful training of adult security staff on techniques for managing youthful offenders was apparent during most of the site visits. Typically, security staff are oriented and trained to deal with adult inmates. Training should prepare staff to recognize and respond to the particular issues faced by a juvenile offender housed in an adult prison, such as the potential for victimization, the emotional effect of incarceration on younger populations, and the way in which substance abuse, education, health, and mental health needs are manifested among younger offenders. This training would be particularly useful for states that have facilities designated for youthful offenders.

Along these lines, it is recommended that adult facilities that house youthful offenders be staffed with people experienced in working in juvenile facilities. These staff are more accustomed to the nonconfrontational methods used to control youth that rely less on use of force techniques and more on peaceful conflict resolution.

Staff in adult facilities are trained to respond to disruptive and confrontational adult offenders. The use of chemical agents such as mace or pepper spray, forced cell extractions, physical restraints, and special response teams, although typically effective with adult offenders, may not be appropriate for juvenile populations. Most juvenile correctional systems discourage the use of such techniques as viable methods of controlling youth except in the most extreme situations, and even then only when lesser measures have been exhausted. Physical handling of a youth is permitted only when other measures, such as counseling and crisis intervention techniques, have failed. For such instances, officers are trained on a myriad of other measures such as empty-hand control tactics, which include various holds, leverage, pressure, self-defense measures, and pressure control techniques.

Adult facilities require assistance and training in devising such techniques that do not rely upon a massive use of force yet are effective in deescalating volatile incidents involving youthful offenders.

Programming

The surveys indicated a deficit in specialized programming for youthful offenders. In some cases, programming such as violence interruption or sex offender treatment is not available. In most others, existing programming was designed to respond to these issues as manifested in the typical adult offender and lacked a more developmentally responsive adaptation of the curricula. Although this situation may be driven by the relatively small number of juveniles in most adult facilities, the lack of appropriate programming for youth in adult facilities remains a major shortcoming in the management of these offenders.

Education

In addition to special management and programming needs, youthful offenders need educational programming that is more structured, thorough, and intensive than that provided in adult institutions. It is important to ensure that facilities are both aware of and adhering to federal mandates to provide regular and special education services to youth in their care.

Incarcerated youth are required to receive regular, special, and vocational education services in accordance with the state law for public schools, the rules and regulations of the state board of education, and the regulations of the 14th amendment of the U.S. Constitution and the Individuals With Disabilities Education Act (IDEA).

All youth should be offered an average of 5.5 hours of daily instruction, 5 days a week, by qualified teachers, in an environment that facilitates learning. Additionally, youth ought to be assigned to grade levels with curricula that are in accordance with their educational level, and they should receive academic credit for their educational achievements.

Facilities should offer GED preparation and testing to qualified prison inmates and juveniles confined in jails for at least 6 months. Youth who are in disciplinary isolation or are otherwise unable to attend school for a significant period of time must be provided with a reasonable level of education services.

Federal regulations through IDEA guarantees special education services to juveniles (up to age 21) in adult facilities as a constitutional right. Although there are no national figures on the number of special education youth who are incarcerated, it is estimated at between 30 and 50 percent require this service. A recent study by Leone and Meisel (2000) on the proportion of special education youth incarcerated in Arizona, Florida, and Maine indicates that between 42 and 60 percent of the juvenile populations are classified as special education. This estimate shows the importance of ensuring that adequate special education services are available to those juveniles who are incarcerated. Proper identification of youth with special education needs, exposure to special education curriculum, and teachers certified as special education instructors should be available to juveniles in adult prisons as well as those in juveniles facilities. Training and technical assistance programs could be developed in partnership with the U.S. Department of Education or the state's education system.

Behavior Management Techniques

The popularity of "get tough" approaches to managing offenders, particularly military models, need to be evaluated for their effectiveness for youthful offenders. Further, security staff would benefit from the development of methods to provide incentives for good behavior and for increasing the level of engagement of the youthful offender populations with the available programming. Here again, most juvenile correctional systems have implemented a variety of positive management programs that allow youth to receive increasing levels of privileges based on good behavior. Such initiatives have proved to be effective methods for managing juvenile populations. Yet, adult correctional systems rarely use or have any experience with such systems.

Housing Strategies

Many jurisdictions would benefit from an assessment of the type of housing that is most effective for managing this population. For example, the cost and benefits of separating youthful offenders from adult offenders should be examined. Given their relatively small numbers, cost-effective options for this type of separation should be developed. Because most youthful offenders are managed in dormitory facilities, the specific management issues relevant to this housing arrangement should be fully explicated.

Given that the volatility and impulsiveness that typically underlies a juvenile's presence in an adult facility can be contagious, correctional systems would benefit from technical assistance focused on strategies for mitigating these situations. Further, best practices associated with appropriate interaction between juvenile and adult offender populations would help increase institutional stability.

Continued Research

Finally, given the relative newness of this issue and the lack of knowledge surrounding the conditions, impact, and consequences of juvenile incarceration in adult facilities, additional research is required. In particular, research is needed to better understand the basis for the decision to place a youth in an adult correctional facility. We also need to learn whether placement in an adult facility has an adverse impact on the conditions of incarceration. Comparative studies are required on the provision of education and vocational services, substance abuse treatment, mental health services, and medical needs as well as protection from harm in juvenile and adult facilities. Such comparative studies will help determine the value of housing youth in adult prisons and jails. If such placements are required by law, adult facilities must know how to create appropriate program offerings and standards of care for youth placed in their care for substantial periods of time.

State Statutes That Govern the Transfer of Juveniles to the Adult Court System

Alabama

§12-15-61 (1999)

(d) A child alleged or adjudicated to be delinquent may be detained in a jail or other facility for the detention of adults for not more than 7 days pursuant to a court order and only if all of the following conditions are met: (i) the detention is approved by the official or officer in charge of the jail; (ii) the jail contains, at the time of the order, an available room in which the child can be detained separate and removed from all contact with adult inmates; and (iii) adequate supervision is available at the time detention in the jail is ordered. A child who has been transferred for criminal prosecution, or who is no longer subject to the juvenile court's jurisdiction shall be detained as an adult.

(e) Except as provided in subsection (d), the official in charge of a jail or other facility for the detention of adult offenders or persons charged with crime shall inform the court immediately when a child, who is or appears to be a child as defined by this chapter, is received at the facility, and shall deliver the child to the court upon request or transfer him or her to a detention facility designated by the court.

Negligence

Even though county had no duty initially to provide cells for the detention of juvenile offenders in the jail used for confinement of adults, once county voluntarily undertook this duty, it thereafter was charged with the duty of acting with due care. Keeton v. Fayette County, 558 So. 2d 884 (Ala. 1989).

Alaska

Alaska Stat. § 47.12.240 (1999)

Detention of minors

(a) When the court commits a minor to the custody of the department, the department shall arrange to place the minor in a detention home, work camp, or another suitable place that the department designates for that purpose.

(b) Except when detention in a correctional facility is authorized by (c) of this section, the minor may not be incarcerated in a correctional facility that houses adult prisoners.

(c) Notwithstanding (a) of this section, a minor may be incarcerated in a correctional facility

(1) if the minor is the subject of a petition filed with the court under this chapter seeking adjudication of the minor as a delinquent minor or if the minor is in official detention pending the filing of that petition; however, detention in a correctional facility under this paragraph may not exceed the lesser of

(A) six (6) hours; or

(B) the time necessary to arrange the minor's transportation to a juvenile detention home or comparable facility for the detention of minors;

(2) if, in response to a petition of delinquency filed under this chapter, the court has entered an order closing the case under AS 47.12.100(a), allowing the minor to be prosecuted as an adult;

(3) if the incarceration constitutes a protective custody detention of the minor that is authorized by AS 47.37.170(b); or

(4) if the minor is at least 16 years of age and the court has entered an order under AS 47.12.160(e) imposing an adult sentence and transferring custody of the minor to the Department of Corrections.

(d) When a minor is detained under (c)(1) or (3) of this section and incarcerated in a correctional facility, the minor shall be

(1) assigned to quarters in the correctional facility that are separate from quarters used to house adult prisoners so that the minor cannot communicate with or view adults who are in official detention;

(2) provided admission, health care, hygiene, and food services and recreation and visitation opportunities separate from services and opportunities provided to adults who are in official detention.

(e) Notwithstanding the limitation on detention set out in (c)(1) of this section, a minor whose detention is authorized by (c)(1) of this section may be detained in a correctional facility for more than six (6) hours if transportation to a juvenile detention home or comparable facility for the detention of minors is not available.

Arizona

§ 8–305

[A] juvenile who is convicted in a jail or lockup in which adults are confined shall be kept in a physically separate section from any adult who is charged with or convicted of a criminal offense, and no sight or sound contact between the juvenile and any charged or convicted adult is permitted, except to the extent authorized under federal laws or regulations.

Arkansas

§ 9–27–336 (1997)

(2) A juvenile alleged to have committed a delinquent act may be held in an adult jail or lockup for up to six (6) hours for purposes of identification, processing, or arranging for release or transfer to an alternative facility, provided he is separated by sight and sound from adults who are pretrial detainees or convicted persons. A holding for those purposes shall be limited to the minimum time necessary and shall not include travel time for transporting the juvenile to the alternative facility; or

(3) (A) A juvenile alleged to have committed a delinquent act who is awaiting an initial appearance before a judge may be held in an adult jail or lockup for up to twenty-four (24) hours, excluding weekends and holidays, provided the following conditions exist:

(i) The alleged act would be a misdemeanor or a felony if committed by an adult or is a violation of § 5–73–119; and

(ii) The geographical area having jurisdiction over the juvenile is outside a metropolitan statistical area pursuant to the United States Bureau of the Census' current designation; and

(iii) No acceptable alternative placement for the juvenile exists; and

(iv) The juvenile is separated by sight and sound from adults who are pretrial detainees or convicted persons.

(B) (i) A juvenile awaiting an initial appearance and being held in an adult jail or lockup pursuant to the twenty-four-hour exception, as provided in subdivision (b)(3)(A) of this section, may be held for an additional period, not to exceed twenty-four (24) hours, provided that the following conditions exist:

(a) The conditions of distance to be traveled or the lack of highway, road, or other ground transportation do not allow for court appearances within twenty-four (24) hours; and

(b) All the conditions in subdivision (b)(3)(A) of this section exist;

(ii) Criteria will be adopted by the Governor or his designee to establish what distance, highway or road conditions, or ground transportation limitations will provide a basis for holding a juvenile in an adult jail or lockup under this exception.

(c) Except as provided in subsection (e) of this section, nothing in this subchapter is intended to prohibit the use of juvenile detention facilities which are attached to or adjacent to adult jails or lockups, provided the facilities are designed and used in accordance with federal and state guidelines and restrictions.

(d) A detention facility shall not release a serious offender for a less serious offender, except by order of the judge who committed the more serious offender.

(e) Provided, however, that upon petition by the quorum court of any county, the Governor may waive the requirements of subsections (b) and (c) of this section and any other provision of state law, state jailing standards, and state regulations limiting the detention of juveniles in adult facilities, subject to the following restrictions:

(1) The authority to grant such a waiver will expire on March 31, 1997; and

(2) Such waivers may be granted only for periods of up to six (6) months, but may be renewed for successive six-month periods, provided all such waivers shall expire on March 31, 1997; and

(3) Such waivers shall be available only if a county:

(A) Is making a good faith effort to provide a juvenile detention facility that otherwise complies with state law and regulations for detaining juveniles in a juvenile detention facility and has entered into a written agreement with another county or counties for that specific purpose; or

(B) Has a juvenile detention facility located in that county, but certifies that no further bed capacity is available or will be available within a reasonable period of time, and certifies that the county will increase the bed capacity of its facility by March 31, 1997; and

(4) Such waivers shall not permit detaining juveniles in the same cell or within physical reach of adults who are pretrial detainees or convicted persons.

California

Cal Wel & Inst Code § 207.1 (1999)

Detention of minor in adult facility

(a) No court, judge, referee, peace officer, or employee of a detention facility shall knowingly detain any minor in a jail or lockup, except as provided in subdivision (b) or (d).

(b) Any minor who is alleged to have committed an offense described in subdivision (b), paragraph (2) of subdivision (d), or subdivision (e) of Section 707 whose case is transferred to a court of criminal jurisdiction pursuant to Section 707.1 after a finding is made that he or she is not a fit and proper subject to be dealt with under the juvenile court law, or any minor who has been charged directly in or transferred to a court of criminal jurisdiction pursuant to Section 707.01, may be detained in a jail or other secure facility for the confinement of adults if all of the following conditions are met:

(1) The juvenile court or the court of criminal jurisdiction makes a finding that the minor's further detention in the juvenile hall would endanger the safety of the public or would be detrimental to the other minors in the juvenile hall.

(2) Contact between the minor and adults in the facility is restricted in accordance with Section 208.

(3) The minor is adequately supervised.

(c) A minor who is either found not to be a fit and proper subject to be dealt with under the juvenile court law or who will be transferred to a court of criminal jurisdiction pursuant to Section 707.01, at the time of transfer to a court of criminal jurisdiction or at the conclusion of the fitness hearing, as the case may be, shall be entitled to be released on bail or on his or her own recognizance upon the same circumstances, terms, and conditions as an adult who is alleged to have committed the same offense.

(d) (1) A minor fourteen (14) years of age or older who is taken into temporary custody by a peace officer on the basis of being a person described by Section 602, and who, in the reasonable belief of the peace officer, presents a serious security risk of harm to self or others, may be securely detained in a law enforcement facility that contains a lockup for adults, if all of the following conditions are met:

(A) The minor is held in temporary custody for the purpose of investigating the case, facilitating release of the minor to a parent or guardian, or arranging transfer of the minor to an appropriate juvenile facility.

(B) The minor is detained in the law enforcement facility for a period that does not exceed six (6) hours except as provided in subdivision (f).

(C) The minor is informed at the time he or she is securely detained of the purpose of the secure detention, of the length of time the secure detention is expected to last, and of the maximum six-hour period the secure detention is authorized to last. In the event an extension is granted pursuant to subdivision (f), the minor shall be informed of the length of time the extension is expected to last.

(D) Contact between the minor and adults confined in the facility is restricted in accordance with Section 208.

(E) The minor is adequately supervised.

(F) A log or other written record is maintained by the law enforcement agency showing the offense that is the basis for the secure detention of the minor in the facility, the reasons and circumstances forming the basis for the decision to place the minor in secure detention, and the length of time the minor was securely detained.

(2) Any other minor, other than a minor to which paragraph (1) applies, who is taken into temporary custody by a peace officer on the basis that the minor is a person described by Section 602 may be taken to a law enforcement facility that contains a lockup for adults and may be held in temporary custody in the facility for the purposes of investigating the case, facilitating the release of the minor to a parent or guardian, or arranging for the transfer of the minor to an appropriate juvenile facility. While in the law enforcement facility, the minor may not be securely detained and shall be supervised in a manner so as to ensure that there will be no contact with adults in custody in the facility. If the minor is held in temporary, nonsecure custody within the facility, the peace officer shall exercise one of the dispositional options authorized by Sections 626 and 626.5 without unnecessary delay and, in every case, within six (6) hours.

(3) "Law enforcement facility," as used in this subdivision, includes a police station or a sheriff's station, but does not include a jail, as defined in subdivision (i).

(e) The Board of Corrections shall assist law enforcement agencies, probation departments, and courts with the implementation of this section by doing all of the following:

(1) The board shall advise each law enforcement agency, probation department, and court affected by this section as to its existence and effect.

(2) The board shall make available and, upon request, shall provide technical assistance to each governmental agency that reported the confinement of a minor in a jail or lockup in calendar year 1984 or 1985. The purpose of this technical assistance is to develop alternatives to the use of jails or lockups for the confinement of minors. These alternatives may include secure or nonsecure facilities located apart from an existing jail or lockup, improved transportation or access to juvenile halls or other juvenile facilities, and other programmatic alternatives recommended by the board. The technical assistance shall take any form the board deems appropriate for effective compliance with this section.

(f) (1) (A) Under the limited conditions of inclement weather, acts of God, or natural disasters that result in the temporary unavailability of transportation, an extension of the six-hour maximum period of detention set forth in paragraph (2) of subdivision (d) may be granted to a county by the Board of Corrections. The extension may be granted only by the board, on an individual, case-by-case basis. If the extension is granted, the detention of minors under those conditions shall not exceed the duration of the special conditions, plus a period reasonably necessary to accomplish transportation of the minor to a suitable juvenile facility, not to exceed six hours after the restoration of available transportation.

(B) A county that receives an extension under this paragraph shall comply with the requirements set forth in subdivision (d). The county also shall provide a written report to the board that specifies when the inclement weather, act of God, or natural disaster ceased to exist, when transportation availability was restored, and when the minor was delivered to a suitable juvenile facility. If the minor was detained in excess of twenty-four (24) hours, the board shall verify the information contained in the report.

(2) Under the limited condition of temporary unavailability of transportation, an extension of the six-hour maximum period of detention set forth in paragraph (2) of subdivision (d) may be granted by the board to an offshore law enforcement facility. The extension may be granted only by the board, on an individual, case-by-case basis. If the extension is granted, the detention of minors under those conditions shall extend only until the next available mode of transportation can be arranged.

An offshore law enforcement facility that receives an extension under this paragraph shall comply with the requirements set forth in subdivision (d). The facility also shall provide a written report to the board that specifies when the next mode of transportation became available, and when the minor was delivered to a suitable juvenile facility. If the minor was detained in excess of twenty-four (24) hours, the board shall verify the information contained in the report.

(3) At least annually, the board shall review and report on extensions sought and granted under this subdivision. If, upon that review, the board determines that a county has sought one or more extensions resulting in the excessive confinement of minors in adult facilities, or that a county is engaged in a pattern and practice of seeking extensions, it shall require the county to submit a detailed explanation of the reasons for the extensions sought and an assessment of the need for a conveniently located and suitable juvenile facility. Upon receiving this information, the board shall make available, and the county shall accept, technical assistance for the purpose of developing suitable alternatives to the confinement of minors in adult lockups.

(g) Any county that did not have a juvenile hall on January 1, 1987, may establish a special purpose juvenile hall, as defined by the Board of Corrections, for the detention of minors for a period not to exceed 96 hours. Any county that had a juvenile hall on January 1, 1987, also may establish, in addition to the juvenile hall, a special purpose juvenile hall. The board shall prescribe minimum standards for that type of facility.

(h) No part of a building or a building complex that contains a jail may be converted or utilized as a secure juvenile facility unless all of the following criteria are met:

(1) The juvenile facility is physically, or architecturally, separate and apart from the jail or lockup such that there could be no contact between juveniles and incarcerated adults.

(2) Sharing of nonresidential program areas only occurs where there are written policies and procedures that assure that there is time-phased use of those areas that prevents contact between juveniles and incarcerated adults.

(3) The juvenile facility has a dedicated and separate staff from the jail or lockup, including management, security, and direct care staff. Staff who provide specialized services such as food, laundry, maintenance, engineering, or medical services, who are not normally in contact with detainees, or whose infrequent contacts occur under conditions of separation of juveniles and adults, may serve both populations.

(4) The juvenile facility complies with all applicable state and local statutory, licensing, and regulatory requirements for juvenile facilities of its type.

(i) (1) "Jail," as used in this chapter, means a locked facility administered by a law enforcement or governmental agency, the purpose of which is to detain adults who have been charged with violations of criminal law and are pending trial, or to hold convicted adult criminal offenders sentenced for less than one year.

(2) "Lockup," as used in this chapter, means any locked room or secure enclosure under the control of a sheriff or other peace officer that is primarily for the temporary confinement of adults upon arrest.

(3) "Offshore law enforcement facility," as used in this section, means a sheriff's station containing a lockup for adults that is located on an island located at least 22 miles from the California coastline.

(j) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prevent a peace officer or employee of an adult detention facility or jail from escorting a minor into the detention facility or jail for the purpose of administering an evaluation, test, or chemical test pursuant to Section 23157 of the Vehicle Code, if all of the following conditions are met:

(1) The minor is taken into custody by a peace officer on the basis of being a person described by Section 602 and there is no equipment for the administration of the evaluation, test, or chemical test located at a juvenile facility within a reasonable distance of the point where the minor was taken into custody.

(2) The minor is not locked in a cell or room within the adult detention facility or jail, is under the continuous, personal supervision of a peace officer or employee of the detention facility or jail, and is not permitted to come in contact or remain in contact with in-custody adults.

(3) The evaluation, test, or chemical test administered pursuant to Section 23157 of the Vehicle Code is performed as expeditiously as possible, so that the minor is not delayed unnecessarily within the adult detention facility or jail. Upon completion of the evaluation, test, or chemical test, the minor shall be removed from the detention facility or jail as soon as reasonably possible. No minor shall be held in custody in an adult detention facility or jail under the authority of this paragraph in excess of two hours.

Detention of minors in juvenile facility until age 19

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in any case in which a minor who is detained in or committed to a county institution established for the purpose of housing juveniles attains the age of 18 prior to or during the period of detention or confinement he or she may be allowed to come or remain in contact with those juveniles until the age of 19, at which time he or she, upon the recommendation of the probation officer, shall be delivered to the custody of the sheriff for the remainder of the time he or she remains in custody, unless the juvenile court orders continued detention in a juvenile facility. The person shall be advised of his or her ability to petition the court for continued detention in a juvenile facility at the time of his or her attainment of the age of 19. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the sheriff may allow such a person to come into and remain in contact with other adults in the county jail or in any other county correctional facility in which he or she is housed.

Colorado

C.R.S. 19–2–508 (1998)

Detention and shelter, hearing, time limits, confinement with adult offenders, restrictions

(4) (a) No jail shall receive a juvenile for detention following a detention hearing pursuant to this section unless the juvenile has been ordered by the court to be held for criminal proceedings as an adult pursuant to a transfer or unless the juvenile is to be held for criminal proceedings as an adult pursuant to a direct filing. No juvenile under the age of fourteen (14) and, except upon order of the court, no juvenile fourteen (14) years of age or older shall be detained in a jail, lockup, or other place used for the confinement of adult offenders. The exception for detention in a jail shall be used only if the juvenile is being held for criminal proceedings as an adult pursuant to a direct filing or transfer.

(b) Whenever a juvenile is held pursuant to a direct filing or transfer in a facility where adults are held, the juvenile shall be physically segregated from the adult offenders.

(c) The official in charge of a jail or other facility for the detention of adult offenders shall immediately inform the court that has jurisdiction of the juvenile's alleged offense when a juvenile who is or appears to be under 18 years of age is received at the facility, except for a juvenile ordered by the court to be held for criminal proceedings as an adult.

(d) Any juvenile arrested and detained for an alleged violation of any article of title 42, C.R.S., or for any alleged violation of a municipal or county ordinance, and not released on bond, shall be taken before a judge with jurisdiction of such violation within forty-eight (48) hours for the fixing of bail and conditions of bond pursuant to subparagraph (IV) of paragraph (a) of subsection (3) of this section. Such juvenile shall not be detained in a jail, lockup, or other place used for the confinement of adult offenders for longer than six (6) hours, and in no case overnight, for processing only, after which the juvenile may be further detained only in a juvenile detention facility operated by or under contract with the department of human services. In calculating time under this subsection (4), Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays shall be included.

(e) The official in charge of a jail, lockup, or other facility for the confinement of adult offenders that receives a juvenile for detention should, wherever possible, take such measures as are reasonably necessary to restrict the confinement of any such juvenile with known past or current affiliations or associations with any gang so as to prevent contact with other inmates at such jail, lockup, or other facility. The official should, wherever possible, also take such measures as are reasonably necessary to prevent recruitment of new gang members from among the general inmate population. For purposes of this paragraph (e), "gang" is defined in section 19-1-103 (52).

(f) Any person who is eighteen (18) years of age or older who is being detained for a delinquent act or criminal charge over which the juvenile court has jurisdiction shall be detained in the county jail in the same manner as if such person is charged as an adult.

Connecticut

Conn. Gen. Stat. § 46b-133c (1997)

Upon transfer, such child shall stand trial and be sentenced, if convicted, as if he were sixteen (16) years of age, except that no such child shall be placed in a correctional facility but shall be maintained in a facility for children and youth until he attains sixteen (16) years of age or until he is sentenced, whichever occurs first.

Florida

Fla. Stat. § 951.23 (1998)

County and municipal detention facilities, definitions, administration, standards and requirements

(a) There shall be established a five-member working group consisting of three persons appointed by the Florida Sheriffs' Association and two persons appointed by the Florida Association of Counties to develop model standards for county and municipal detention facilities. By October 1, 1996, each sheriff and chief correctional officer shall adopt, at a minimum, the model standards with reference to:

- (2) The confinement of prisoners by classification and providing, whenever possible, for classifications which separate males from females, juveniles from adults.

Fla. Stat. § 985.211 (1998)
Release or delivery from custody

(5) Upon taking a child into custody, a law enforcement officer may deliver the child, for temporary custody not to exceed 6 hours, to a secure booking area of a jail or other facility intended or used for the detention of adults, for the purpose of fingerprinting or photographing the child or awaiting appropriate transport to the department or the appropriate juvenile probation officer or detention facility or center, provided no regular sight and sound contact between the child and adult inmates or trustees is permitted and the receiving facility has adequate staff to supervise and monitor the child's activities at all times.

Fla. Stat. § 985.215 (1998)
Detention

Under no circumstances shall the juvenile probation officer or the state attorney or law enforcement officer authorize the detention of any child in a jail or other facility intended or used for the detention of adults, without an order of the court.

(3) Except in emergency situations, a child may not be placed into or transported in any police car or similar vehicle that at the same time contains an adult under arrest, unless the adult is alleged or believed to be involved in the same offense or transaction as the child.

(4) The court shall order the delivery of a child to a jail or other facility intended or used for the detention of adults:

(a) When the child has been transferred or indicted for criminal prosecution as an adult pursuant to this part, except that the court may not order or allow a child alleged to have committed a misdemeanor who is being transferred for criminal prosecution to be detained or held in a jail or other facility intended or used for the detention of adults; however, such child may be held temporarily in a detention facility; or shall have an adequate staff to supervise and monitor the child's activities at all times. Supervision and monitoring of children includes physical observation and documented checks by jail or receiving facility supervisory personnel at intervals not to exceed 15 minutes. This paragraph does not prohibit placing two or more children in the same cell. Under no circumstances shall a child be placed in the same cell with an adult.

(b) When a child taken into custody in this state is wanted by another jurisdiction for prosecution as an adult. The child shall be housed separately from adult inmates to prohibit a child from having regular contact with incarcerated adults, including trustees. "Regular contact" means sight and sound contact. Separation of children from adults shall permit no more than haphazard or accidental contact. The receiving jail or other facility shall contain a separate section for children and

Georgia

§15-11-20 (1998)

(a) Allegation of delinquency. A child alleged to be delinquent may be detained only in:

(c) Transfer following indictment. Following an indictment for an offense over which the superior court has exclusive or concurrent jurisdiction under subsection (b) of Code Section 15-11-5 or following the transfer of a case to any court for criminal prosecution under Code Section 15-11-39, the child shall be held only in a facility described in paragraphs (1) through (3) of subsection (a) of this Code section unless it appears to the satisfaction of the superior court that public safety and protection reasonably require detention in the jail and the court so orders, but only where the detention is in a room separate and removed from those for adults and constructed in such a way that there can be no physical contact between a child and an adult offender.

(d) Notification of court by official of jail. The official in charge of a jail or other facility for the detention of adult offenders or persons charged with crime shall immediately inform the juvenile court or a duly authorized officer of the juvenile court if a person who is or appears to be under the age of seventeen (17) years is received at the facility and shall bring him or her before the court upon request or deliver him or her to a detention or shelter care facility designated by the court; provided, however, the official in charge of a jail or other facility for the detention of adult offenders or persons charged with a crime shall immediately inform the court in which the case is pending or a duly authorized officer of such court if a person who is or appears to be thirteen (13) to seventeen (17) years of age and who is alleged to have committed any offense enumerated in subparagraph (b)(2)(A) of Code Section 15-11-5 is received at the facility and shall bring him or her before the court upon request or deliver him or her to a detention facility designated by the court. Such child shall not be held in the jail, but may be held in a temporary holding area outside of the jail constructed as such for not longer than six (6) hours pending transfer to the detention facility. For purposes of this Code Section, the term "jail" shall include not only the cells, but any other secured area of the jail adjacent to the cells in which adult offenders are held or through which they are transported.

Hawaii

HRS § 571-32 (1999)

Detention, shelter, release, notice

(d) ...If there is probable cause to believe that the child comes within section 571-11(1), the child may be securely detained in a certified police station cell block or community correctional center. The detention shall be limited to six (6) hours. In areas which are outside a standard metropolitan statistical area, the detention may be up to twenty-four (24) hours, excluding weekends and holidays, if no detention facility for juveniles is reasonably available. Any detention in a police station cell block or community correctional center shall provide for the sight and sound separation of the child from adult offenders.

(i) The official in charge of a facility for the detention of adult offenders or persons charged with crime shall inform the court immediately when a child who is or appears to be under eighteen (18) years of age is received at the facility.

(k) The department of human services through the office of youth services shall certify police station cell blocks and community correctional centers that provide sight and sound separation between children and adults in secure custody. Only cell blocks and centers certified under this subsection shall be authorized to detain juveniles. The office of youth services may develop sight and sound separation standards, issue certifications, monitor and inspect facilities for compliance, cite facilities for violations, withdraw certifications, and require certified facilities to submit such data and information as requested. In addition, the office of youth services may monitor and inspect all cell blocks and centers for compliance.

Idaho

§ 20-509 (1998)

(2) Once a juvenile has been formally charged or indicted according to this section or has been transferred for criminal prosecution as an adult pursuant to the waiver provisions of sec. 2-508, Idaho Code, or this section, the juvenile shall be held in a county jail or adult prison facility unless the court, after finding good cause, orders otherwise.

Illinois

§ 705 ILCS 405/5-410

Non-secure custody or detention

(1) Any minor arrested or taken into custody pursuant to this Act who requires care away from his or her home but who does not require physical restriction shall be given temporary care in a foster family home or other shelter facility designated by the court.

(2) (a) Any minor 10 years of age or older arrested pursuant to this Act where there is probable cause to believe that the minor is a delinquent minor and that (i) secured custody is a matter of immediate and urgent necessity for the protection of the minor or of the person or property of another, (ii) the minor is likely to flee the jurisdiction of the court, or (iii) the minor was taken into custody under a warrant, may be kept or detained in an authorized detention facility. No minor under 12 years of age shall be detained in a county jail or a municipal lockup for more than 6 hours.

(b) The written authorization of the probation officer or detention officer (or other public officer designated by the court in a county having 3,000,000 or more inhabitants) constitutes authority for the superintendent of any juvenile detention home to detain and keep a minor for up to 40 hours, excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and court-designated holidays. These records shall be available to the same persons and pursuant to the same conditions as are law enforcement records as provided in Section 5-905 [705 ILCS 405/5-905].

(b-4) The consultation required by subsection (b-5) shall not be applicable if the probation officer or detention officer (or other public officer designated by the court in a county having 3,000,000 or more inhabitants) utilizes a scorable detention screening instrument, which has been developed with input by the State's Attorney, to determine whether a minor should be detained, however, subsection (b-5) shall still be applicable where no such screening instrument is used or where the probation officer, detention officer (or other public officer designated by the court in a county having 3,000,000 or more inhabitants) deviates from the screening instrument.

(b-5) Subject to the provisions of subsection (b-4), if a probation officer or detention officer (or other public officer designated by the court in a county having 3,000,000 or more inhabitants) does not intend to detain a minor for an offense which constitutes one of the following offenses he or she shall consult with the State's Attorney's Office prior to the release of the minor: first degree murder, second degree murder, involuntary manslaughter, criminal sexual assault, aggravated criminal sexual assault, aggravated battery with a firearm, aggravated or heinous battery involving permanent disability or disfigurement or great bodily harm, robbery, aggravated robbery, armed robbery, vehicular hijacking, aggravated vehicular hijacking, vehicular invasion, arson, aggravated arson, kidnaping, aggravated kidnaping, home invasion, burglary, or residential burglary.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (a), (d), or (e), no minor shall be detained in a county jail or municipal lockup for more than 12 hours, unless the offense is a crime of violence in which case the minor may be detained up to 24 hours. For the purpose of this paragraph, "crime of violence" has the meaning ascribed to it in Section 1-10 of the Alcoholism and Other Drug Abuse and Dependency Act [20 ILCS 301/1-10].

(i) The period of detention is deemed to have begun once the minor has been placed in a locked room or cell or handcuffed to a stationary object in a building housing a county jail or municipal lockup. Time spent transporting a minor is not considered to be time in detention or secure custody.

(ii) Any minor so confined shall be under periodic supervision and shall not be permitted to come into or remain in contact with adults in custody in the building.

(iii) Upon placement in secure custody in a jail or lockup, the minor shall be informed of the purpose of the detention, the time it is expected to last, and the fact that it cannot exceed the time specified under this Act.

(iv) A log shall be kept which shows the offense which is the basis for the detention, the reasons and circumstances for the decision to detain, and the length of time the minor was in detention.

(v) Violation of the time limit on detention in a county jail or municipal lockup shall not, in and of itself, render inadmissible evidence obtained as a result of the violation of this time limit. Minors under seventeen (17) years of age shall be kept separate from confined adults and may not at any time be kept in the same cell, room, or yard with adults confined pursuant to criminal law. Persons seventeen (17) years of age and older who have a petition of delinquency filed against them shall be confined in an adult detention facility.

(d) (i) If a minor twelve (12) years of age or older is confined in a county jail in a county with a population below 3,000,000 inhabitants, then the minor's confinement shall be implemented in such a manner that there will be no contact by sight, sound, or otherwise between the minor and adult prisoners. Minors twelve (12) years of age or older must be kept separate from confined adults and may not at any time be kept in the same cell, room, or yard with confined adults. This paragraph (d)(I) shall only apply to confinement pending an adjudicatory hearing and shall not exceed 40 hours, excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and court-designated holidays. To accept or hold minors during this time period, county jails shall comply with all monitoring standards promulgated by the Department of Corrections and training standards approved by the Illinois Law Enforcement Training Standards Board.

(ii) To accept or hold minors, twelve (12) years of age or older, after the time period prescribed in paragraph (d)(i) of this subsection (2) of this Section but not exceeding seven (7) days including Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays pending an adjudicatory hearing, county jails shall comply with all temporary detention standards promulgated by the Department of Corrections and training standards approved by the Illinois Law Enforcement Training Standards Board.

(iii) To accept or hold minors twelve (12) years of age or older, after the time period prescribed in paragraphs (d)(i) and (d)(ii) of this subsection (2) of this Section, county jails shall comply with all programmatic and training standards for juvenile detention homes promulgated by the Department of Corrections.

(e) When a minor who is at least fifteen (15) years of age is prosecuted under the criminal laws of this State, the court may enter an order directing that the juvenile be confined in the county jail.

However, any juvenile confined in the county jail under this provision shall be separated from adults who are confined in the county jail in such a manner that there will be no contact by sight, sound, or otherwise between the juvenile and adult prisoners.

(f) For purposes of appearing in a physical lineup, the minor may be taken to a county jail or municipal lockup under the direct and constant supervision of a juvenile police officer. During such time as is necessary to conduct a lineup, and while supervised by a juvenile police officer, the sight and sound separation provisions shall not apply.

(g) For purposes of processing a minor, the minor may be taken to a county jail or municipal lockup under the direct and constant supervision of a law enforcement officer or correctional officer. During such time as is necessary to process the minor, and while supervised by a law enforcement officer or correctional officer, the sight and sound separation provisions shall not apply.

(3) If the probation officer or State's Attorney (or such other public officer designated by the court in a county having 3,000,000 or more inhabitants) determines that the minor may be a delinquent minor as described in subsection (3) of Section 5-105 [705 ILCS 405/5-105], and should be retained in custody but does not require physical restriction, the minor may be placed in nonsecure custody for up to 40 hours pending a detention hearing.

(4) Any minor taken into temporary custody, not requiring secure detention, may, however, be detained in the home of his or her parent or guardian subject to such conditions as the court may impose.

(B) there is no other action reasonably available to alleviate the problem.

(3) No offender may be transferred to the Indiana state prison or the Pendleton Correctional Facility.

(b) The offender is under the full custody of the adult facility or program to which he is transferred until he is returned to a facility or program for delinquent offenders, except that his parole or discharge from the department shall be determined under IC 11-13-6.

Iowa

Code § 232.22 (1997)

Placement in detention

2. Except as provided in subsection 6, a child may be placed in detention as provided in this section in one of the following facilities only:

a. A juvenile detention home.

b. Any other suitable place designated by the court other than a facility under paragraph "c."

c. A room in a facility intended or used for the detention of adults if there is probable cause to believe that the child has committed a delinquent act which if committed by an adult would be a felony, or aggravated misdemeanor under section 708.2 or 709.11, a serious or aggravated misdemeanor under section 321J.2, or a violation of section 123.46, and if all of the following apply:

(1) The child is at least fourteen (14) years of age.

(2) The child has shown by the child's conduct, habits, or condition that the child constitutes an immediate and serious danger to another or to the property of another, and a facility or place enumerated in paragraph “a” or “b” is unavailable, or the court determines that the child’s conduct or condition endangers the safety of others in the facility.

(3) The facility has an adequate staff to supervise and monitor the child’s activities at all times.

(4) The child is confined in a room entirely separated from detained adults, is confined in a manner which prohibits communication with detained adults, and is permitted to use common areas of the facility only when no contact with detained adults is possible.

4. A child shall not be detained in a facility under subsection 2, paragraph “c” for a period of time in excess of six (6) hours without the oral or written order of a judge or a magistrate authorizing the detention. A judge or magistrate may authorize detention in a facility under subsection 2, paragraph “c” for a period of time in excess of six (6) hours but less than twenty-four (24) hours, excluding weekends and legal holidays, but only if all of the following occur or exist:

a. The facility serves a geographic area outside a standard metropolitan statistical area as determined by the United States Census Bureau.

b. The court determines that an acceptable alternative placement does not exist pursuant to criteria developed by the department of human services.

c. The facility has been certified by the department of corrections as being capable of sight and sound separation.

d. The child is awaiting an initial hearing before the court.

6. If the court has waived its jurisdiction over the child for the alleged commission of a forcible felony offense pursuant to section 232.45 or 232.45A, and there is a serious risk that the child may commit an act which would inflict serious bodily harm on another person, the child may be held in the county jail. However, wherever possible the child shall be held in sight and sound separation from adult offenders. A child held in the county jail under this subsection shall have all the rights of adult postarrest or pretrial detainees.

C. Except when a juvenile is held in an adult jail or lockup, the time limitations for the conduct of a continued custody hearing are those provided by Article 819.

D. The court exercising criminal jurisdiction shall retain jurisdiction over the child's case, even though he pleads guilty to or is convicted of a lesser included offense. A plea to or conviction of a lesser included offense shall not revest jurisdiction in the court exercising juvenile jurisdiction over such a child.

Maine

§ 3101 (1998)

E-1. If the Juvenile Court binds the juvenile over to Superior Court, the court may direct detention of any such juvenile who is to be detained in a section of a jail that is used primarily for the detention of adults when it finds by clear and convincing evidence that:

- (1) The juvenile's behavior presents an imminent danger of harm to that juvenile or to others; and
- (2) There is not a less restrictive alternative to detention in an adult section that serves the purposes of detention.

In determining whether the juvenile's behavior presents a danger to that juvenile or others, the Juvenile Court shall consider, among other factors:

- (a) The nature of and the circumstances surrounding the offense with which the juvenile is charged, including whether the offense was committed in an aggressive, violent, premeditated, or intentional manner;
- (b) The record and previous history of the juvenile, including the juvenile's emotional attitude and pattern of living; and
- (c) If applicable, the juvenile's behavior and mental condition during any previous and current period of detention or commitment.

4 (g) Placement of child alleged to be delinquent. A child alleged to be delinquent may not be detained in a jail or other facility for the detention of adults.

Massachusetts

Mass. Ann. Laws ch. 119, § 67 (1999)

Notice of arrest of child to be given to probation officer and parent or guardian, release to probation officer

No child between fourteen (14) and seventeen (17) years of age shall be detained in a police station or town lockup unless the detention facilities for children at such police station or town lockup have received the approval in writing of the commissioner of youth services. The department of youth services shall make inspection at least annually of police stations or town lockups wherein children are detained. If no such approved detention facilities exist in any city or town, such city or town may contract with an adjacent city or town for the use of approved detention facilities in order to prevent children who are detained from coming in contact with adult prisoners. Nothing in this section shall permit a child between fourteen (14) and seventeen (17) years of age being detained in a jail or house of correction. A separate and distinct place shall be provided in police stations, town lockups, or places of detention for such children.

MCR 5.956 (1998)

(B) Violation of probation in delayed imposition of sentence cases.

(1) Subsequent Conviction.

If a juvenile placed on probation under an order of disposition delaying imposition of sentence is found by the court to have violated probation by being convicted of a felony or a misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment for more than one (1) year, or adjudicated as responsible for an offense that if committed by an adult would be a felony or a misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment for more than one (1) year, the court shall revoke probation and sentence the juvenile to imprisonment for a term that does not exceed the penalty that could have been imposed for the offense for which the juvenile was originally convicted and placed on probation.

(2) Other violations of probation. If a juvenile placed on probation under an order of disposition delaying imposition of sentence is found by the court to have violated probation other than as provided in subrule (B)(1), the court may impose sentence or may order any of the following for the juvenile:

- (a) a change in placement;
- (b) community service;
- (c) substance abuse counseling;
- (d) mental health counseling;
- (e) participation in a vocational-technical program;
- (f) incarceration in the county jail for not more than thirty (30) days if the present county jail facility would meet all requirements under federal law and regulations for housing juveniles and if the court has consulted with the sheriff to determine when the sentence will begin to ensure that space will be available for the juvenile. If the juvenile is under seventeen (17) years of age, the juvenile must be placed in a room or ward out of sight and sound from adult prisoners; other participation or performance as the court considers necessary.

Releasing or detaining juveniles prior to trial or judgment of sentence

(B) (2) Jailing of Juveniles; Restricted. On motion of a prosecuting attorney or a superintendent of a juvenile facility where the juvenile is detained, the magistrate or court may order the juvenile confined in a jail or similar facility designed and used to incarcerate adult prisoners upon a showing that

(a) the juvenile's habits or conduct are considered a menace to other juveniles; or

(b) the juvenile may not otherwise be safely detained in a juvenile facility.

(3) Juvenile-Court-Operated Facility. The juvenile shall not be placed in an institution operated by the juvenile court except with the consent of the juvenile court or on order of a court as defined in these rules.

(4) Separate Custody of Juvenile. The juvenile in custody or detention must be maintained separately from the adult prisoners or adult accused as required by MCL 764.27a; MSA 28.886(1).

MCR 6.933 (1998)

Rule 6.933 Juvenile probation revocation

(A) General Procedure. When a juvenile, who was placed on juvenile probation and committed to an institution as a state ward, is alleged to have violated juvenile probation, the court shall proceed as provided in MCR 6.445(A) through (F).

(B) Disposition.

(1) Certain Criminal Offense Violations. If the court finds that the juvenile has violated juvenile probation by being convicted of a felony or a misdemeanor punishable by more than one year's imprisonment, the court must revoke the probation of the juvenile and order the juvenile committed to the department of corrections for a term of years not to exceed the penalty that could have been imposed for the offense that led to the probation. The court in imposing sentence shall grant credit against the sentence as required by law.

(2) Other Violations. If the court finds that the juvenile has violated juvenile probation, other than as provided in subrule (B)(1), the juvenile must be continued on juvenile probation and remain under state wardship provided that the court may order:

- (a) a change of placement,
- (b) restitution,
- (c) community service,
- (d) substance abuse counseling,
- (e) mental health counseling,
- (f) participation in a vocational-technical education program,
- (g) incarceration in a county jail for not more than thirty (30) days, and
- (h) any other participation or performance as the court considers necessary.

If the court determines to place the juvenile in jail for up to thirty (30) days, and the juvenile is under seventeen (17) years of age, the juvenile must be placed separately from adult prisoners as required by law.

(3) If the court revokes juvenile probation pursuant to subrule (B)(1), the court must receive an updated presentence report and comply with MCR 6.445(G) before it imposes a prison sentence on the juvenile.

(C) Review. The juvenile may appeal as of right from the imposition of a sentence of incarceration after a finding of juvenile probation violation.

MCR 6.937 (1998)

It is clear from the new Public Acts that the Legislature intended that a juvenile under seventeen (17), who is criminally prosecuted without a waiver hearing under § 4 of the Juvenile Code, may not be detained in a jail with adult prisoners pending trial, acquittal or conviction, or decision at a juvenile disposition hearing. The Legislature intended that the juvenile who is criminally charged with one or more enumerated life offense without being waived over must be housed in a juvenile facility. The exceptions are if the juvenile is considered to be a menace to other juveniles because of habit or conduct, or may not otherwise be safely detained. In such cases the juvenile may be housed in a jail or similar institution designed to incarcerate adult prisoners, if placed in a room or ward out of sight and sound from the other adults. Note further that the juvenile, from the point of apprehension, must be kept separate from adult prisoners. The Juvenile Court Rules Committee, when it formulated suggested proposals based on the new legislation, debated the question whether the district court was authorized to place a juvenile in a facility pending trial. The committee found no specific express provision because there is none. The statutory waiver package, read as a whole, establishes that the Legislature believed that the source of authority to detain a juvenile in a juvenile facility pending trial is § 27a of Chapter IV (arrests) in the Code of Criminal Procedure:

“(1)If a juvenile is taken into custody or detained, the juvenile shall not be confined in a police station, prison, jail, lockup, or reformatory, or be transported with, or compelled or permitted to associate or mingle with, criminal persons while awaiting trial. However, a juvenile whose habits or conduct are considered to be a menace to other children, or who may not otherwise be safely detained, may be ordered by a court to be placed in a jail or other place of detention for adults, but in a room or ward out of sight and sound from adults.

“(2) If a person is convicted of a crime within this state and has served time in a juvenile facility prior to sentencing because of being denied or being unable to furnish bond for the offense of which he or she is convicted, the trial court in imposing sentence shall specifically grant credit against the sentence for time served in a juvenile facility prior to sentencing.” MCL 764.27a; MSA 28.886(1), as added by 1988 PA 67. It would have been preferable for the Legislature to have expressly stated that the juvenile may be detained in a juvenile facility with court sanction pending trial or disposition. Nevertheless, when a juvenile is apprehended and the prosecutor has authorized the filing of a criminal complaint and warrant, it is believed that the juvenile may be placed in a juvenile facility unless and until the court, including a district court, either orders the juvenile released with or without bail at arraignment, or other hearing, orders the juvenile committed to jail, because the juvenile is a menace to other children or may not otherwise be safely detained, or continues the detention in the juvenile facility. Commitment pending trial, if at all, was clearly intended by the Legislature to be in a juvenile facility. Unlike the juvenile system, which is civil in nature and which requires specific statutory authority in order to hold a juvenile pending adjudication, the accused in the adult criminal system is detained on a charge until arraigned and ordered released, even if arrested without a warrant. The written authority to detain if needed is provided by the complaint and warrant. Section 27a represents a further limitation on government than just the Fourth Amendment and the like when it comes to juveniles who are to be criminally prosecuted as though adults. But a limitation implies authority that needs limits. The first sentence of § 27a(1) assumes not only that the juvenile has been taken into custody. It also assumes that the juvenile may be subject to detention. This is followed by the limitation that the juvenile not be put with adult prisoners while awaiting trial. The second sentence of § 27a(1), making provision for the juvenile who may be a menace to other children, assumes that the juvenile will probably be in a facility with children—a juvenile facility. It should be remembered that jail has been defined by the Legislature in the Code of Criminal Procedure to include a juvenile facility for purposes of placement under § 27a. This indicates there is an absolute prohibition against placing a juvenile with adult prisoners in any facility whatsoever. The second sentence of § 27a also indicates that a court may put a juvenile in jail who may not otherwise be safely detained. “Juvenile facility” equates with jail for purposes of placement under § 27a. This may mean that the court that had earlier conditioned release of the juvenile on in-home detention, foster care and the like, and later finds that the juvenile cannot otherwise be safely detained in such lesser restrictive environment, or is a menace to others, may place that juvenile in secure detention in a juvenile facility or, if necessary, in a jail used to incarcerate adults so long as the juvenile is out of sight and sound from adults.

(4) Child detention alternatives. If the child is taken into custody as one who:

(c) is reasonably believed to have violated the terms of probation, parole, or other field supervision under which the child has been placed, the child may be detained in a shelter care or secure juvenile detention facility. If the child cannot be detained in another type of detention facility, and if there is no secure juvenile detention facility or existing acceptable detention alternative available for juveniles within the county, a child described in this subdivision may be detained up to 24 hours, excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays, or up to six (6) hours in a standard metropolitan statistical area, in a jail, lockup, or other facility used for the confinement of adults who have been charged with or convicted of a crime, in quarters separate from any adult confined in the facility which has been approved for the detention of juveniles by the commissioner of corrections. If continued detention in an adult jail is approved by the court under section 260.172, subdivision 2, and there is no juvenile secure detention facility available for use by the county having jurisdiction over the child, such child may be detained for no more than eight (8) days from and including the date of the original detention order in separate quarters in any jail or other adult facility for the confinement of persons charged with or convicted of crime which has been approved by the commissioner of corrections to be suitable for the detention of juveniles for up to eight (8) days.

Temporary custody, disposition, custody requirements

(3) The officer shall take a juvenile without unnecessary delay before the juvenile court or probation officer of the county in which such juvenile was taken into custody and deliver the custody of such juvenile to the juvenile court or probation officer. When secure custody of a juvenile is necessary, such custody shall occur within a juvenile detention facility except:

(a) When a juvenile described in subdivision (1) or (2) of section 43–247, except for a status offender, is taken into temporary custody within a metropolitan statistical area and where no juvenile detention facility is reasonably available, the juvenile may be delivered, for temporary custody not to exceed six (6) hours, to a secure area of a jail or other facility intended or used for the detention of adults solely for the purposes of identifying the juvenile and ascertaining his or her health and well-being and for safekeeping while awaiting transport to an appropriate juvenile placement or release to a responsible party;

(b) When a juvenile described in subdivision (1) or (2) of section 43–247, except for a status offender, is taken into temporary custody outside of a metropolitan statistical area and where no juvenile detention facility is reasonably available, the juvenile may be delivered, for temporary custody not to exceed twenty-four (24) hours excluding nonjudicial days and while awaiting an initial court appearance, to a secure area of a jail or other facility intended or used for the detention of adults solely for the purposes of identifying the juvenile and ascertaining his or her health and well-being and for safekeeping while awaiting transport to an appropriate juvenile placement or release to a responsible party;

(c) Whenever a juvenile is held in a secure area of any jail or other facility intended or used for the detention of adults, there shall be no verbal, visual, or physical contact between the juvenile and any incarcerated adult and there shall be adequate staff to supervise and monitor the juvenile’s activities at all times. This subdivision shall not apply to a juvenile charged with a felony as an adult in county or district court if he or she is sixteen (16) years of age or older;

(d) If a juvenile is under sixteen (16) years of age or is a juvenile as described in subdivision (3) of section 43–247, he or she shall not be placed within a secure area of a jail or other facility intended or used for the detention of adults;

(e) If, within the time limits specified in subdivision (3)(a) or (3)(b) of this section, a felony charge is filed against the juvenile as an adult in county or district court, he or she may be securely held in a jail or other facility intended or used for the detention of adults beyond the specified time limits;

(f) A status offender or nonoffender taken into temporary custody shall not be held in a secure area of a jail or other facility intended or used for the detention of adults. (g) A juvenile described in subdivision (1) or (2) of section 43–247, except for a status offender, may be held in a secure area of a jail or other facility intended or used for the detention of adults for up to six (6) hours before and six (6) hours after any court appearance;

(2) No juvenile who has been taken into temporary custody under subdivision (3) of section 43–250 shall be detained in any locked facility for longer than twenty-four (24) hours, excluding nonjudicial days, after having been taken into custody unless such juvenile has appeared personally before a court of competent jurisdiction for a hearing to determine if continued detention is necessary. If continued detention in a locked facility is ordered, such detention shall be in a juvenile detention facility, except that a juvenile charged with a felony as an adult in county or district court may be held in an adult jail as set forth in subdivision (3)(e) of section 43–250.

Conditions of detention of child, detention or confinement in adult facility

(A)(2) No child alleged or adjudicated to be deprived or in need of supervision or who is or appears to be a child in need of mental health treatment as defined by the Inpatient Mental Health Treatment of Children Act, shall be confined in any jail, adult lockup, or adult detention facility. No child shall be transported or detained in association with criminal, vicious, or dissolute persons.

(E)(1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, no child shall be placed in secure detention in a jail, adult lockup, or other adult detention facility unless:

- a. the child is detained for the commission of a crime that would constitute a felony if committed by an adult, and

- b. the child is awaiting an initial court appearance, and
- c. the child's initial court appearance is scheduled within twenty-four (24) hours after being taken into custody, excluding weekends and holidays, and
- d. the court of jurisdiction is outside of the Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area as defined by the Bureau of Census, and
- e. there is no existing acceptable alternative placement for the child, and
- f. the jail, adult lockup, or adult detention facility meets the requirements for licensure of juvenile detention facilities, as adopted by the Office of Juvenile Affairs, is appropriately licensed, and provides sight and sound separation for juveniles, which includes:
 - (1) total separation between juveniles and adult facility spatial areas such that there could be no haphazard or accidental contact between juvenile and adult residents in the respective facilities,
 - (2) total separation in all juvenile and adult program activities within the facilities, including recreation, education, counseling, health care, dining, sleeping, and general living activities, and
 - (3) separate juvenile and adult staff, specifically direct care staff such as recreation, education, and counseling.

Specialized services staff, such as cooks, bookkeepers, and medical professionals who are not normally in contact with detainees or whose infrequent contacts occur under conditions of separation of juvenile and adults can serve both.

2. Nothing in this section shall preclude a child who is detained for the commission of a crime that would constitute a felony if committed by an adult, or a child who is an escapee from a juvenile training school or from a Department of Juvenile Justice group home from being held in any jail certified by the State Department of Health, police station, or similar law enforcement offices for up to six (6) hours for purposes of identification, processing or arranging for transfer to a secure detention or alternative to secure detention. Such holding shall be limited to the absolute minimum time necessary to complete these actions.

- a. The time limitations for holding a child in a jail for the purposes of identification, processing, or arranging transfer established by this section shall not include the actual travel time required for transporting a child from a jail to a juvenile detention facility or alternative to secure detention.

b. Whenever the time limitations established by this subsection are exceeded, this circumstance shall not constitute a defense in a subsequent delinquency or criminal proceeding.

3. Nothing in this section shall preclude detaining in a county jail or other adult detention facility an 18-year-old charged in a juvenile petition for whom certification to stand trial as an adult is prayed.

4. Nothing in this section shall preclude detaining in a county jail or other adult detention facility a person provided for in Section 7304–1.2 of this title if written or electronically transmitted confirmation is received from the state seeking return of the individual that the person is a person provided for in Section 7304–1.2 of this title and if, during the time of detention, the person is detained in a facility meeting the requirements of 7304–1.3 of this title.

5. Nothing in this section shall preclude detaining a person, whose age is not immediately ascertainable and who is being detained for the commission of a felony, in a jail certified by the State Department of Health, a police station, or similar law enforcement office for up to twenty-four (24) hours for the purpose of determining whether or not the person is a child, if:

a. there is a reasonable belief that the person is eighteen (18) years of age or older,

b. there is a reasonable belief that a felony has been committed by the person,

c. a court order for such detention is obtained from a judge of the district court within six (6) hours of initially detaining the person,

d. there is no juvenile detention facility that has space available for the person and that is within thirty (30) miles of the jail, police station, or law enforcement office in which the person is to be detained, and

e. during the time of detention the person is detained in a facility meeting the requirements of subparagraph f of paragraph 1 of this subsection.

The time limitation provided for in this paragraph shall include the time the person is detained prior to the issuance of the court order.
